

CONTENTS

Preface	page ix
List of Abbreviations	x

INTRODUCTION

I	The purpose of the dialogue and its position in the Platonic writings	3
II	Stylometric arguments. The transcendent forms	8
III	The nature of the soul	11
IV	The characters	12
V	The arguments for the immortality of the soul	16
VI	Arguments for immortality in other dialogues	19

TRANSLATION AND COMMENTARY

I	57A–59C Introductory conversation	27
II	59C–62C Socrates as poet. The wickedness of suicide	32
III	62C–64C The philosopher's readiness to die	39
IV	64C–67B The philosopher's detachment from the body	44
V	67B–69E Moral virtue, genuine and spurious	52
VI	69E–72D The first argument for immortality. The cycle of opposites	58

VII	72E-77A	page 66
	A complementary argument. The theory of recollection
VIII	77A-78B	78
	Combined results of the two preceding arguments. Socrates as charmer
IX	78B-80C	81
	Third argument. The kinship of souls and forms
X	80C-82D	87
	The after-life of unpurified souls
XI	82D-85B	92
	Socrates describes the philosopher's progress and declares his swan-song to be a song of joy
XII	85B-88B	97
	Simmias and Cebes explain their doubts
XIII	88C-91C	105
	Interlude. A warning against 'misology'
XIV	91C-95A	112
	Refutation of Simmias's theory of soul
XV	95A-99D	121
	Socrates as student of natural science
XVI	99D-102A	133
	The new method of hypothesis
XVII	102A-105B	147
	The exclusion of opposites
XVIII	105B-107B	158
	The argument concluded. Soul is both deathless and indestructible
XIX	107C-110B	167
	Myth of the after-life
XX	110B-112E	176
	The splendour of the true earth. The rivers of the underworld

CONTENTS

vii

XXI	112E-115A	page 182
	The myth concluded. Its truth and value
XXII	115B-118	187
	The last scene
	Additional Notes	191
	The Criticisms of Strato	195
	Index of Names	199