

Nicholas Frangipane

Multiple Narratives,
Versions and Truth
in the Contemporary Novel

palgrave
macmillan

CONTENTS

1	Introduction	1
1.1	Moving Past-postmodernism	3
1.2	The Value of Fiction	5
1.3	Post-postmodernism?	6
1.4	Truth?	8
2	Shifting Attitudes Toward the Verisimilitude of Narrative in Twentieth- and Twenty-First-Century Literature	11
2.1	A Modernist Sense of Unease	13
2.2	From Modernist Unease to Postmodernist Incredulity	19
2.3	Productive Potential in Contemporary Fiction	29
3	The Quality of Qualia: Truth and Ethics in Reflexive Double Narratives	37
3.1	Postmodernist and Post-postmodernist Double Narratives: Similar Styles, Different Aims	38
3.2	Alice Munro and Qualia	50
3.3	The Distinction of (Non) Fiction? Double Narratives and Ethics in Non-fictional Texts	59
4	Joyful Solipsism: Implied Multiple Narratives in the Contemporary Novel	71
4.1	Unknowability in Contemporary Novels	73

5	Double Memories: Multiple Versions of Memories as a Way to Understand Characters and Ourselves	85
5.1	Stories and Minds	88
5.2	The Productive Potential of Two Versions of a Memory in Post-postmodernist Fiction	93
6	Conclusion: A Dark Turn and Other Manifestations	105
6.1	Post-postmodernism and Post-truth	105
6.2	Other Manifestations	108
	Works Cited	111
	Index	117