

Rashi's Commentary
on the Torah

Canonization and Resistance in the Reception of a Jewish Classic

ERIC LAWEE

OXFORD
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

Acknowledgments	xi
Abbreviations	xv
Notes on Translations and Editions	xvii
Introduction—Rashi's Commentary on the Torah : Canonical and Classic	1

PART I: Toward Canonicity

1. Conundrums of the Commentary : Contours of a Classic	15
Textual Vicissitudes	15
Character, Aims, Authorial Voice	20
210 Years of Egyptian Exile: A Midrash of Rashi and Its Afterlife	27
Bloodstream of Jewish Culture	30
2. Rashi's Commentary : Receptions, 1105–1527	33
Medieval Ashkenaz	33
Arrival in Spain	39
Sefardic Biblical Scholarship I: Al-Andalus Comes to the Commentary	43
Sefardic Biblical Scholarship II: Valorization and Ambivalence in Christian Spain	48
Abroad in Hispano-Jewish Society	54
Last Century in Spain: Between Embattlement and Diverse Forms of Enthronement	57
Southern France: Initial Reception and Intercommunal Strife	62

- Southern French Exegesis: Integration, Indifference, Indirect Criticism 67
- Augmented Impress in the Age of Print 72
3. Interpreting the Interpreter: Supercommentarial Receptions in Ashkenaz and Sefarad 79
- Incipient Supercommentary in France and Germany 84
- Decline of the Generations: German Supercommentary After the Black Death 88
- Sefardic “Servants of Solomon”: Exegesis and Appropriation 94
- “Rashi Is the Word of God”: Supercommentary and the Omnisignificant Imperative 110
- The Supercommentarial Difference: A Great Voice That Does Not Cease 115

PART II: Resisting Readers

4. “Ridiculousness and Risibility”: Rationalist Criticism in an Eastern Mediterranean Key 119
- Byzantine Jewry: Cultural Confluences and Conflicts 120
- Eastern Mediterranean Exegetical Reception 125
- “All Who Hear Will Laugh”: Rashi Criticism in a Maimonidean Key 130
5. Rationalism versus the Rashi/Rabbinic Axis: Pseudo-Rabad’s Book of Strictures 150
- A Pseudepigraphic Stricturalist and His Aims 151
- Midrashic Falsehoods 155
- Midrashic Absurdities 169
- Rabbinic Received Traditions, Peshatist Achievements 178
- “Rashi Said . . . Their Mistake Was” 181
- Rhetoric of Resistance 185
- Pseudo-Rabad’s Readers: Intended, Actual, Censorious 190
- Fragments in the (Eastern Mediterranean?) Round 192
6. Aaron Aboulrabi and “The Straight One”: Between “Girls’ Fantasies” and “Sweet Midrash” 196

“From Pillar to Post”	197
“ Derash of Barbarians,” “ Derash of a Dolt”	200
Exculpating the Righteous, Anathematizing the Wicked	207
Sweet Midrash, True Midrash, Supercommentary	214
In Dialogue and Disputation with Pseudo-Rabad	221
Confronting and Reconfiguring Rashi’s Judaism: “I Shall Not Acquit the Wrongdoer”	224
Conclusion	229

PART III: Commentary Triumphant

7. Competing Canons: Rashi’s Commentary in a Late Medieval Battle for Judaism’s Soul	235
“Like Any Prophet”: Abraham ibn Ezra as Alternative and Rival	237
Ibn Ezra and Rashi’s Resisting Readers	242
The Book of Accusations : “In Every Place Where His Name Is Invoked”	250
Resisting Reading in Religiocultural Context	256
Elijah Mizrahi: Rashi’s “Trusted Servant”	259
Commentary Triumphant	262
Afterword—Rashi’s Commentary on the Torah in Modern Times	266
Notes	275
Bibliography	389
Subject Index	449
Index of Manuscripts	471
Index of References to Biblical Verses	473
a) Rashi, Commentary on the Torah	473
b) Rashi, Talmud commentary	475
c) Eleazar Ashkenazi, Şafenat pa’neah	475
d) Pseudo-Rabad, Sefer hassagot	476
e) Aaron Aboulrabi, as in Perushim le-rashi	476