

Japan's Cold War Policy and China

Two Perceptions of Order, 1960–1972

Yutaka Kanda

Contents

Acknowledgments	x
Introduction: Research questions and analytical framework	1
Section 1: Transformation of the Cold War structure and Japanese diplomacy in the 1960s	1
Section 2: Categorization of two order frameworks and leaders	6
(1) Japan-US-China partnership: conservative mainstream and Asian solidarity	6
(2) The Japan-US-China-USSR cooperation: the anti-Yoshida groups and the realists	16
I Resistance and the failed isolation of China: the Ikeda administration's policies toward China, 1960–1964	23
Section 1: Willingness to deal with the China problems	23
(1) Ikeda's pro-China tendencies and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs' Cold War perceptions	23
(2) The United Nations and the incorporation of China into international society	33
Section 2: Running in opposite directions: Japan and the United States on their policies toward China and the Soviet Union	45
(1) Discovery of the Sino-Soviet confrontation	45
(2) Establishment of the LT trade and the persuasion of Western Europe	60
(3) Japan-US friction on China – nuclear weapons development, Sino-Indian conflict, Sino-Soviet confrontation and Sino-Japanese contact	70
(4) Vinylon plant exports and the progress of US-Soviet détente	82

Section 3: Rise of the Sino-US confrontation and the collapse of Ikeda diplomacy 97

- (1) Yoshida's transformation and impact of the establishment of diplomatic relations between France and China 97
- (2) Commitment to pro-China diplomacy and the Vietnam countercurrent 108

2 Adaptation to, and discord with, US-Soviet cooperation: Japanese policy toward China in the early Sato administration 1964–1968

123

Section 1: Sato Eisaku's personality in his policy toward China 123

- (1) Cooperation with Yoshida and Ikeda and his positive attitude toward China 123
- (2) Relationship between Kishi and cautious China policy 129
- (3) From China to Okinawa 137

Section 2: Sino-US conflicts and the formation of the Japan-US-USSR affiliation 144

- (1) Establishment of Sato diplomacy – emphasis on cooperation with the United States 144
- (2) Participation in the net encircling China – the Japan-South Korea-Taiwan cooperation and the Japan-US-USSR affiliation 158
- (3) Sino-Japanese contact and the bridge between China and the United States 174

Section 3: Debate over the isolation of China 187

- (1) Pro-China, anti-Soviet expressions of opinion 187
- (2) Sato's foreign travel and objection to the isolation of China 192
- (3) Outlook of post-Vietnam and post-Cultural Revolution 201

3 Sino-US rapprochement and the Japanese diplomatic choice – the Sato and Tanaka administrations and the normalization of Sino-Japanese diplomatic relations 1969–1972

207

Section 1: Emergence of US-China-Soviet triple axis and alienation of the Sato administration 207

- (1) Sino-Soviet re-rapprochement or Sino-US rapprochement 207

(2) Miscalculation of Japanese militarism and the textile issue, and the Northern Territories objective	224
(3) Diplomacy in the run-up to Sino-US rapprochement	233
Section 2: Sino-US rapprochement and Sato's diplomatic guidance	240
(1) Ministry of Foreign Affairs' cautious approach and Sato's pro-China tendencies	240
(2) Disharmony with Fukuda diplomacy and succession to Tanaka administration	249
Section 3: Sino-Japanese diplomatic normalization and anti-Soviet resonance	266
(1) Tanaka Kakuei's Japan-US-China isosceles-triangle approach	266
(2) Sino-Japanese rapprochement and the bewilderment of both superpowers	270
(3) Tanaka's visit to China and diplomatic policy towards the Soviet Union – "hegemony" and "privilege" or "superiority"	277
4 "Cold War" and "Asian order"	281
Index	285