

Table of Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
Introduction: Movies and the Art of Humanity JOHNSON CHEU	1
Section One: Outsider Characters and Other Oddities
“Why Spend Your Life Making Someone Else’s Dreams?”: Ed Wood Comes Out and Makes His Own Dreams in a Fluffy Pink Angora Sweater GAEL SWEENEY	8
An Odd Quest Continued: The Heroes of Tim Burton RACHEL S. MCCOPPIN	21
Mixed Assortment: The Typical and Atypical Body in Charlie and the Chocolate Factory ELIZABETH LEIGH SCHERMAN	36
Corporeal Mediation and Visibility in Sleepy Hollow LORI PARKS	54
Capitalism and Its Discontents: Gender, Property and Nature in Batman Returns, Sleepy Hollow and Corpse Bride SUSAN M. BERNARDO	70
Section Two: The Nature of Adaptations
Becoming the Stories: Indefinite Play in Big Fish LISA K. PERDIGAO	86
Mixing Man and Monkey in Planet of the Apes KIMIKO AKITA and RICK KENNEY	102
“A Stranger in a Sea of Familiar Faces”: Self-Referentiality, Bodily Hauntings and Materializing Identity in Dark Shadows LANCE NORMAN	117

“Attend the Tale”: Burton’s Transformation of Sweeney Todd from Stage Epic to Screen Intimacy BRIAN D. HOLCOMB	134
Navigating the Risks of Re-Adaptation: Burton’s Charlie and the Chocolate Factory After Dahl and Stuart PAMELA KRAYENBUHL	150
The Kids Aren’t All Right: Childhood Liminality and the Monstrous-Cute in Burton’s Roald Dahl Adaptations SARAH DOWNES	165
Section Three: Technology, Artistry and Stardom
Converging Worlds: Neo-Victorianism in the Stop-Motion Films KARA M. MANNING	184
The Use of German Expressionism and American Exceptionalism PETER C. KUNZE	198
“I’m Not Finished”: Gender Transgression and Star Persona in Edward Scissorhands DEBORAH MELLAMPHY	212
Films Referenced	229
About the Contributors	233
Index	237