

The Desiring Modes of Being Black

Literature and Critical Theory

Jean-Paul Rocchi

ROWMAN &
LITTLEFIELD

INTERNATIONAL

London • New York

Contents

Foreword	ix
Acknowledgments	xiii
Introduction: The Desiring Black Subject as Reading Method	1
1 The Other Bites the Dust: Toward an Epistemology of Identity	23
2 The Making of a Man: A Modernist Etiology of American Masculinities—Trauma, Testimony, Resistance	49
3 Dying Metaphors and Deadly Fantasies: Freud, Baldwin, and the Meta-Psychoanalysis of Race	63
4 Desire as “E mag e nation”: South African Black Consciousness and Post-Identity in Rozena Marrt’s “No Rosa, No District Six”	91
5 “The Substance of Things Hoped For”: Melvin Dixon’s Vanishing Rooms ; or Racism Intimately	107
6 Writing as I Lay Dying: AIDS Literature and the H(a)unting of Blackness	119
7 The Word’s Image: Self-Portrait as a Conscious Lie	141
Notes	153
Bibliography	161
Index	173