

Videogames and Art

Second Edition

Edited by Andy Clarke and Grethe Mitchell

intellect Bristol, UK / Chicago, USA

Contents

Introduction	1
Grethe Mitchell and Andy Clarke
SECTION I: Overviews	29
From Appropriation to Approximation	31
Axel Stockburger
Meltdown	47
Rebecca Cannon
Videogames as Literary Devices	67
Jim Andrews
High-Performance Play: The Making of Machinima	75
Henry Lowood
“Cracking the Maze”: Curator’s Note	99
Anne-Marie Schleiner
SECTION II: Artists on Art	103
Two Interviews with Brody Condon	105
Andy Clarke
In Conversation Fall 2003 and Spring 2012: Interviews with Joseph Delappe	127
Jon Winet
Figures in a Landscape: In Conversation with Gibson/Martelli (igloo)	155
Grethe Mitchell

The Idea of Doing Nothing: An Interview with Tobias Bernstrup Francis Hunger	179
Staying in to Play: The Works of John Paul Bichard John Paul Bichard	191
An Interview with Eddo Stern Andy Clarke and Grethe Mitchell	215
The Isometric Museum: The Sim Gallery Online Project (an interview with Curators Katherine Isbister and Rainey Straus) Jane Pinckard	235
The Evolution of a GBA Artist (2004) Paul Catanese	249
From Fictional Videogame Stills to Time Travelling with Rosalind Brodsky, 1991-2005 Suzanne Treister	259
Virtual Retrofit (or What Makes Computer Gaming So Damn Racy?) M.A. Greenstein	275
Perspective Engines: An Interview with JODI Francis Hunger	285
How Independent Game Development looked in 2002 (an interview with Julian Oliver and Kipper) Melanie Swalwell	295
Medieval Unreality: Initiating an Artistic Discourse on Albania's Blood Feud by Editing a First-Person Shooter Game Nina Czegledy and Maia Engeli	321
SECTION III: Games and Other Art Forms	343
Should Videogames Be Viewed as Art? Brett Martin	345
Some Notes on Aesthetics in Japanese Videogames William Huber	357

Contents

The Computer as a Dollhouse (excerpts) Tobey Crockett	369
Networking Power: Videogame Structure from Concept Art Laurie Taylor	379
Fan Art as a Function of Agency in Oddworld Fan Culture Gareth Schott and Andrew Burn	395
Will Computer Games Ever Be a Legitimate Art Form? Ernest W. Adams	417
Notes on Contributors and Artists	431