

Corporate Tax Residence and Mobility

*2017 EATLP Congress Łódź
1 – 3 June 2017*

Editor:
Edoardo Traversa

Volume 16
EATLP International Tax Series

Table of Contents

Preface		v
About the Authors		vii
Part I Thematic Reports
Chapter 1:	Corporate Tax Residence at the Crossroads between International Competition and Convergence: Outlining the Debate	3
	Edoardo Traversa
1.1.	Functions of the residence concept for the application of corporate taxation	4
1.1.1.	In domestic law	5
1.1.2.	In tax treaties	8
1.1.3.	The EU law dimension	11
1.2.	Residence and cross-border mobility under international and EU tax law	13
1.3.	The simultaneous reinforcement and erosion of the concept of residence in the time of BEPS	17
1.4.	Possible evolution of the residence concept	19
Chapter 2:	History and Emergence of the Corporate Residence Concept in Europe: A Comparative Approach	27
	Roland Ismer
2.1.	Introduction	27
2.2.	Corporate residence under civil law	33
2.2.1.	Corporate residence for domestic law purposes	34
2.2.2.	Corporate residence under conflict of laws rules: Lex societatis	37

Tabel of Contents

2.2.2.1.	Historical background	37
2.2.2.2.	Connecting factors in an international context	38
2.3.	Corporate residence under domestic tax law	42
2.3.1.	Formal criteria	43
2.3.1.1.	Legal seat of a company – POI test and others	44
2.3.1.2.	Incorporation test with exemptions	46
2.3.2.	Substantive criteria	47
2.3.2.1.	Place of (effective) management	48
2.3.2.2.	Central management and control (CMC)	50
2.3.2.3.	Open standard provision	51
2.3.2.4.	Other substantive criteria	51
2.3.3.	Coexistence of criteria vs. single criterion	53
2.3.3.1.	Single criterion	53
2.3.3.2.	Coexistence of alternative criteria	55
2.4.	Corporate residence under international tax law and European tax law	56
2.4.1.	Tax treaty residence	56
2.4.1.1.	Evolution of the corporate residence concept under tax treaties	57
2.4.1.2.	Tax treaty residence under article 4(1) of the OECD MC: Status quo of the Model and divergent country practice	60
2.4.1.3.	Dealing with dual-resident corporations: Tie-breaker test under article 4(3) of the OECD MC	61
2.4.2.	Residence under European tax law	70
2.5.	Conclusion	72
Chapter 3a:	Taxpayers' Mobility in the Context of Tax Treaty Law: The Need for a Renewed Balance between Favouring the Movement of Persons and Tackling Treaty Abuse Carla De Pietro	77
3a.1.	Taxpayers' global mobility and the fragmentation of the notion of treaty abuse: Legal framework and critical issues	77

3a.2.	US anti-inversion rules and the fragmentation of the notion of treaty abuse: Effects of unilateralism on taxpayers' mobility	80
3a.3.	The amendments to the Commentary on Article 1 of the OECD Model Tax Convention: Towards coordination	84
3a.4.	Moving towards a better equilibrium between the need to effectively fight against treaty abuse and the need to avoid unnecessary obstacles to taxpayers' mobility	89
Chapter 3b:	Corporate Tax Residence and Mobility in the European Union Borbála Kolozs	91
3b.0	Introduction	91
3b.1.	Corporation law of the reporting countries	91
3b.2.	EU law issues related to corporation law when companies migrate	95
3b.3.	Residence for tax purposes	97
3b.4.	Immigration and emigration of corporations for tax purposes	99
3b.5.	Conclusions	103
Chapter 4:	Residence, Multinational Enterprises and BEPS: Is Determining the Residence of Companies Belonging to Multinational Groups Mission Impossible? Raymond Adema, Irene Burgers and Maarten de Wilde	105
4.1.	Introduction	105
4.2.	The international governance struggle in drafting a definition for effective place of management	108

Tabel of Contents

4.3.	National reports	110
4.3.1.	Introduction	110
4.3.2.	Tax connecting factors	110
4.3.3.	Dual-resident companies: The tie-breaker rule	114
4.3.3.1.	Place of effective management	115
4.3.3.2.	Mutual agreement procedure	117
4.3.3.3.	(Statutory) seat, place of registration, the law under which the company was created or mixture of criterion	119
4.3.3.4.	No tie-breaker rule	119
4.3.4.	Recommendations of national reporters	120
4.4.	Corporate residence; drivers of potential disconnection between economic presence and taxable presence	121
4.4.1.	Introduction	121
4.4.2.	Corporate nationality; a legal construct to localize corporate taxable presence	121
4.4.3.	Place of effective management; localization of corporate management functions to localize corporate taxable presence	123
4.4.4.	Permanent establishment; localization of tangible business operations to localize corporate taxable presence	126
4.5.	Some keys to tax planning strategies – A three-tiered approach	127
4.6.	Countermeasures and their implications	130
4.6.1.	Governments seem on the case; the BEPS initiative and its adherence to current tax framework	130
4.6.2.	Some implications: Substance and red tape	131
4.7.	Takeaways; corporate residence, a mission impossible?	133

Chapter 5:	The Future of Corporate Residency Tsilly Dagan	135
5.1.	Introduction	135
5.2.	Corporations transforming from subjects (charters) into customers	137
5.3.	Taxpayers from consumers to members and back?	139
5.4.	The transformation of states from exclusive sovereigns into competitive market actors	140
5.4.1.	Marketization	142
5.4.2.	Fragmentation	146
5.5.	The resulting shift of power from states to MNEs	149
5.6.	Can states regain taxing powers?	152
5.7.	Conclusion	155

Part 2
National Reports

Chapter 6:	Austria Johannes Heinrich and Mona Philomena Ladler	159
6.1.	(Tax) residence in the domestic context	159
6.1.1.	Civil law, corporate law and other non-tax areas	159
6.1.1.1.	Statutory seat as a decisive factor	159
6.1.1.2.	The real seat as a connecting factor in international cases	162
6.1.1.3.	Challenging the seat of a company	164
6.1.1.4.	The notion of residence of companies in other areas of law	164
6.1.2.	Tax law	165
6.1.2.1.	Residence of companies according to Austrian law	165
6.1.2.2.	The meaning of the term “seat” in tax law	166

Tabel of Contents

6.1.2.3.	The meaning of the term “place of management” in tax law	167
6.1.2.4.	Tax implications of being considered a resident company for direct taxation	169
6.1.2.5.	Challenging the residence of a company	170
6.1.2.6.	Anti-avoidance rules	171
6.1.2.7.	The role of the residence of a person for the application of other taxes (e.g. VAT)	172
6.2.	Tax residence in an international (cross-border) context	173
6.2.1.	Austria’s treaty policy with regard to the residence of companies	173
6.2.2.	Connecting factors	174
6.2.3.	”Liable-to-tax” (article 4, paragraph 1 OECD MTC) and tax-exempt legal entities	174
6.2.4.	Dual resident companies	177
6.2.5.	BEPS Action 6	181
6.3.	Tax implications of cross-border change of residence	182
6.3.1.	Immigration of companies	182
6.3.2.	Emigration of companies	183
6.4.	Policy issues	184
Chapter 7:	Belgium	187
	Niels Bammens and François Henneaux
7.1.	Residence in the domestic context	187
7.1.1.	Corporate law, international private law and insolvency law	187
7.1.1.1.	Introduction	187
7.1.1.2.	The situation before 2004	188
7.1.1.3.	The introduction of the Code on International Private Law	190
7.1.1.4.	Recognition as a subject of Belgian law	192
7.1.2.	Tax law	193
7.1.2.1.	Residence under Belgian corporate income tax law	193
7.1.2.2.	Case law on the determination of residence	197
7.1.2.3.	Advance rulings	198
7.1.2.4.	Consequences of Belgian residence	200

7.1.2.5.	Procedural issues and the possibility to challenge a company's residence	200
7.1.2.6.	Other taxes on companies	201
7.2.	Residence in an international context	202
7.2.1.	"Resident" for tax treaty purposes	202
7.2.1.1.	Reference to domestic tax laws	202
7.2.1.2.	Being "liable to tax"	203
7.2.1.3.	Limitation-on-benefits clauses	204
7.2.1.4.	Tie-breaker rule	205
7.2.2.	Tax implications of cross-border change of residence	207
7.2.2.1.	Corporate immigration	207
7.2.2.2.	Corporate emigration	209
7.2.3.	Policy issues	210
7.2.3.1.	Offshore companies	210
7.2.3.2.	Minority shareholders in corporate emigrations	211
7.2.4.	Personal position	212
Chapter 8:	Corporate Tax Residence in the Czech Republic	213
	Michal Radvan and Johan Schweigl
8.1.	Tax residence in the domestic context	213
8.1.1.	Civil law and corporate law	213
8.1.2.	Other non-tax areas	216
8.1.3.	Czech national tax law	218
8.1.3.1.	Tax residency	219
8.1.3.2.	Selected tax administration issues	223
8.2.	Tax residence in an international (cross-border) context	226
8.2.1.	Residence in (tax) treaties	226
8.2.2.	Tax implications of a cross-border change of residence	230
8.2.3.	Policy issues	232
8.2.4.	Conclusion and personal position	233

Chapter 9:	Denmark	235
	Peter Koerver Schmidt, Anders Nørgaard Laursen and Troels Michael Lilja
9.1.	(Tax) residence in the domestic context	235
9.1.1.	Civil law, corporate law and other non-tax areas	235
9.1.1.1.	Criteria for clarifying the nationality within Danish corporate law	235
9.1.1.2.	Challenging a Danish company's nationality	237
9.1.1.3.	Other areas where nationality matters	237
9.1.2.	Tax law	239
9.1.2.1.	Public and private limited companies	239
9.1.2.2.	"Other corporations"	240
9.1.2.3.	Resident in Denmark for corporate tax purposes	242
9.1.2.4.	The implications of corporate tax residency in Denmark	249
9.2.	(Tax) residence in an international (cross-border) context	250
9.2.1.	Residence in (tax) treaties	250
9.2.1.1.	Resident persons (corporations) in Danish tax treaties	250
9.2.1.2.	The "liability to tax" criterion in Danish tax treaties	252
9.2.1.3.	Exclusion of resident corporations by anti- avoidance provisions	254
9.2.1.4.	The tie-breaker provision in Danish tax treaties	257
9.2.2.	Tax implications of cross-border change of residence	257
9.2.2.1.	Immigration	257
9.2.2.2.	Emigration	258
9.2.3.	Policy issues	261
9.2.4.	Personal position	262
Chapter 10:	Finland	265
	Matti Urpilainen
10.1.	Residence rules in Finnish domestic law	265
10.1.1.	Civil law	265
10.1.2.	Tax law	267

10.2.	Tax residence in a cross-border context	269
10.2.1.	Tax treaties	269
10.2.2.	Change of residence	273
10.2.3.	Policy issues	276
10.2.4.	Concluding remarks	277
Chapter 11:	France	279
	Alexandre Maitrot de la Motte
11.1.	(Tax) residence in the domestic context	280
11.1.1.	Civil law, corporate law and other non-tax areas	280
11.1.2.	Tax law	283
11.1.2.1.	The application of the principle of territoriality to the “enterprises operated in France”	283
11.1.2.2.	The notion of “enterprise operated in France”	284
11.1.2.2.1.	The existence of an autonomous establishment or of a representative without independent professional status: Two classical ways to be considered as subject to corporate tax	284
11.1.2.2.2.	The complete commercial cycle: An unusual criterion in the tax landscape	286
11.1.2.3.	The consequences of the application of the territoriality principle	287
11.1.2.4.	Some exceptions to the principle of territoriality	289
11.1.2.5.	Challenging the liability to tax of an enterprise	290
11.2.	(Tax) residence in an international (cross-border) context	291
11.2.1.	Residence in (tax) treaties	292
11.2.2.	Tax implications of the cross-border change of residence	296
11.2.3.	Policy issues	298
11.2.4.	Personal position	299
Chapter 12:	Germany	301
	Heribert M. Anzinger
12.1.	(Tax) residence in the domestic context	301
12.1.1.	Civil law, corporate law, and other non-tax areas	301
12.1.1.1.	Domestic civil and corporate law	301
12.1.1.2.	International private law	303
12.1.1.2.1.	Real seat and incorporation theory	303
12.1.1.2.2.	Actual centre of administration-criteria	306

Tabel of Contents

12.1.1.2.3.	Coverage of corporate statute law	306
12.1.1.3.	Other non-tax areas	307
12.1.1.3.1.	Constitutional law	307
12.1.1.3.2.	Regulatory law	307
12.1.1.3.3.	Accounting law	308
12.1.1.3.4.	Insolvency law	309
12.1.2.	Tax law	309
12.1.2.1.	(Corporate) tax residence criteria	309
12.1.2.1.1.	Historical development	309
12.1.2.1.2.	Seat	310
12.1.2.1.3.	Place of management	311
12.1.2.1.4.	Comparison with other common residence criteria	314
12.1.2.2.	(Other) functions of tax residence	314
12.1.2.2.1.	Corporation tax and income tax	314
12.1.2.2.2.	Local business tax	315
12.1.2.2.3.	Withholding tax	315
12.1.2.2.4.	Inheritance, gift and wealth tax	316
12.1.2.2.5.	Procedural law	316
12.1.2.3.	Practice of tax administration, advance rulings and mutual agreements	317
12.1.2.4.	Anti-avoidance rules and principles	317
12.2.	(Tax) residence in an international (cross-border) context	318
12.2.1.	Residence in tax treaties	318
12.2.1.1.	Criteria in tax treaty practice	318
12.2.1.1.1.	Treaty policy	318
12.2.1.1.2.	Tax liability	320
12.2.1.1.3.	Territorial connecting factors	321
12.2.1.2.	Tie-breaker rules	322
12.2.1.3.	Anti-avoidance provisions	323
12.2.1.4.	Mutual agreements	324
12.2.2.	Tax implications of the cross-border change of residence	325
12.2.2.1.	Corporate immigration	325
12.2.2.1.1.	Change of actual seat of effective management	325
12.2.2.1.2.	Change of legal seat	326
12.2.2.2.	Corporate emigration	327
12.2.2.2.1.	Change of actual seat of effective management	327
12.2.2.2.2.	Change of the legal seat	328
12.2.2.2.3.	Implications for shareholders	329
12.2.2.3.	Influence of EU (case) law	329

12.2.3.	Policy issues	330
12.2.4.	Personal position	331
Chapter 13:	Ireland	333
	Aidan Lucey and Gerardine Doyle
13.1.	(Tax) residence in the domestic context	333
13.1.1.	Civil law, corporate law and other non-tax areas	333
13.1.1.1.	Legal criteria used in determining the state of residence	333
13.1.1.2.	Challenging company residence and relevant case law	334
13.1.1.3.	Other areas of law to which the notion of residence is relevant	334
13.1.1.4.	Connecting factors	335
13.1.2.	Tax law	336
13.1.2.1.	Domestic rules in determining the residence of companies	336
13.1.2.2.	Hierarchy of criteria used	339
13.1.2.3.	Factual elements considered relevant for assessing a company's tax residence	339
13.1.2.4.	Place of effective management and control	341
13.1.2.4.1.	Group companies	341
13.1.2.4.2.	Burden of proof of the location of board meetings	342
13.1.2.5.	Instruments used by the tax authorities	342
13.1.2.6.	Tax implications of being considered a resident company	343
13.1.2.7.	Challenging tax residency	343
13.2.	(Tax) residence in an international (cross-border) context	346
13.2.1.	Residence in (tax) treaties	346
13.2.1.1.	Anti-avoidance provisions	347
13.2.1.2.	Tie-breaker rule	348
13.2.2.	Tax implications of cross-border change of residence	349
13.2.3.	Policy issues	351
13.2.4.	Personal position	352

Chapter 14:	Italy	355
	Giuseppe Melis
14.1.	(Tax) residence in the domestic context	355
14.1.1.	Civil law, corporate law and other non-tax sectors	355
14.1.2.	Tax law	356
14.1.2.1.	The concept of tax residence and its importance	356
14.1.2.2.	The reversed burden of proof	357
14.1.2.3.	The relationship between the criteria used by article 73 of TUIR 1986 and the relevance of additional criteria	358
14.1.2.4.	The criteria set out in article 73 of TUIR 1986	359
14.1.2.4.1.	Registered office	359
14.1.2.4.2.	Place of management	359
14.1.2.4.3.	The main object of business	363
14.1.2.5.	Ruling	367
14.1.2.6.	Insights regarding the place of effective management	368
14.1.2.7.	Burden of proof and tax assessment	369
14.1.2.8.	Tax residence, tax evasion and tax avoidance	369
14.1.2.9.	Controlled foreign company rules, conduit companies and treaty abuse	370
14.1.2.10.	Residence for withholding tax and VAT purposes	372
14.2.	(Tax) residence in an international (cross-border) context	373
14.2.1.	Residence in tax treaties	373
14.2.1.1.	The Italian practice	373
14.2.1.2.	The expression “liable to”	374
14.2.1.3.	Anti-avoidance clauses: Limitation on benefits clauses	375
14.2.1.4.	Anti-avoidance clauses: Beneficial ownership	377
14.2.1.5.	Tie-breaker rule	378
14.2.2.	Tax implications of cross-border change of residence	380
14.2.3.	Policy issues	381
14.2.4.	Personal position	382

Chapter 15:	Luxembourg	383
	Katerina Pantazatou
15.1.	(Tax) residency in a domestic context	383
15.1.1.	Civil law, corporate law and other non-tax areas	383
15.1.2.	Tax law	387
15.1.2.1.	The evolution of the notion of fiscal residence in Luxembourg	388
15.1.2.2.	Tax residence and the definition of “central administration”	390
15.1.2.3.	Abuse and substance	393
15.2.	(Tax) residence in an international (cross-border) context	396
15.2.1.	Residence in tax treaties	396
15.2.2.	Tax implications of a cross-border change of residence	400
15.2.2.1.	Immigrating companies	400
15.2.2.2.	Emigrating companies	401
15.3.	Conclusions	402
Chapter 16:	The Netherlands	405
	Harm van den Broek
16.1.	(Tax) residence in the domestic context	405
16.1.1.	Civil law, corporate law and other non-tax areas	405
16.1.1.1.	Residence for company law purposes	405
16.1.1.2.	Disputes concerning the residence for company law purposes	408
16.1.1.3.	Corporate residence in other fields of law	408
16.1.1.4.	Other connecting factors than residence	409
16.1.2.	Tax law	409
16.1.2.1.	Consequences of corporate residence for tax purposes	409
16.1.2.2.	Residence of companies under the General Act on State Taxes	411
16.1.2.3.	Taxation on grounds of nationality: Fiction of residence	415
16.1.2.4.	Disputes concerning residence	417
16.1.2.5.	Anti-avoidance rules and CFC legislation	420
16.1.2.6.	Place of residence in connections with other taxes	421

Table of Contents

16.2.	(Tax) residence in an international (cross-border) context	422
16.2.1.	Residence in (tax) treaties	422
16.2.2.	Tax implications of the cross-border change of residence	426
16.2.2.1.	Immigration of companies	426
16.2.2.2.	Emigration of companies	427
16.2.3.	Policy issues	430
16.2.4.	Personal position	432
Chapter 17:	Norway	435
	Eivind Furueth
17.1.	(Tax) residence in the domestic context	435
17.1.1.	Civil law, corporate law and other non-tax areas	435
17.1.2.	Tax law	437
17.1.2.1.	Introduction	437
17.1.2.2.	A company registered and established in a foreign country	438
17.1.2.3.	A company established and registered in Norway	441
17.1.2.4.	Distinguishing whether a company is registered and established in Norway	442
17.2.	(Tax) residence in an international (cross-border) context	443
17.2.1.	Residence in (tax) treaties	443
17.2.1.1.	The criteria used for determining tax residency	443
17.2.1.2.	Anti-avoidance provisions included in tax treaties	444
17.2.1.2.1.	LOB exclusion clause	444
17.2.1.2.2.	An “exclusion clause” with reference to statutory law	444
17.2.1.2.3.	An “exclusion clause” with its own definition	445
17.2.1.3.	Article 4(3) of the OECD Model	447
17.2.2.	Tax implications of the cross-border change of residence	448
17.2.2.1.	Immigration	448
17.2.2.2.	Emigration	449
17.2.3.	Policy issues	451
17.2.4.	Personal position	453
	Bibliography	456

Chapter 18:	Poland	457
	Ziemowit Kukulski and Małgorzata Sęk
18.1.	(Tax) residence in the domestic context	457
18.1.1.	Civil law, corporate law and other non-tax areas	457
18.1.1.1.	Residence criteria under domestic private (corporate) law and private international law	457
18.1.1.2.	Challenging the residence of a company	459
18.1.1.3.	Notion of residence in other areas of law (besides tax law)	460
18.1.2.	Tax law	461
18.1.2.1.	Residence criteria of companies under domestic income tax law	461
18.1.2.2.	Hierarchy between residence criteria and the relevance of different criteria	462
18.1.2.3.	Administrative and judicial practice concerning residence criteria	464
18.1.2.4.	The use of existing instruments of international administrative cooperation in assessing tax residence	464
18.1.2.5.	Implications of being considered a resident company in domestic income tax law	466
18.1.2.6.	Challenging the residence of a company	467
18.1.2.7.	The role of residence in the application of other taxes on companies	470
18.2.	(Tax) residence in an international (cross-border) context	472
18.2.1.	Residence in (tax) treaties	472
18.2.1.1.	Criteria determining the tax residence of companies in tax treaties concluded by Poland	472
18.2.1.2.	Criteria used to define the companies included in the scope of other international agreements concluded by Poland	474
18.2.1.3.	The meaning of the expression “liable to tax” in Polish administrative practice, case law and literature	474
18.2.1.4.	Anti-avoidance provisions and LOB clauses in Polish tax treaty practice	475
18.2.1.5.	Tie-breaker rules in case of dual residence of companies in DTCs concluded by Poland	478

Tabel of Contents

18.2.1.6.	Interpretation of the concept of place of effective management in Poland	480
18.2.2.	Tax implications of the cross-border change of residence	481
18.2.3.	Policy issues	483
18.2.4.	Personal position	484
Chapter 19:	Portugal	487
	Maria dos Prazeres Lousa
19.1.	(Tax) residence in the domestic context	487
19.1.1.	General introduction	487
19.1.2.	Corporate “residence” in the domestic context: Civil law, corporate law and other non-tax areas	488
19.1.3.	Tax law	493
19.1.3.1.	The criteria for determining the residence status	493
19.1.3.2.	Residence status for IRC purposes	495
19.2.	Tax residence in an international context	497
19.2.1.	Residence in tax treaties	497
19.2.1.1.	Dual residence companies	498
19.2.2.	Tax implications of a cross-border change of residence	500
19.3.	Final remarks	503
Chapter 20:	Russia	505
	Elena Kilinkarova, Evgeniy Pustovalov, Andrey Savitsky and Evgeniy Zakharov
20.1.	Civil law, corporate law and other non-tax areas	505
20.1.1.	Civil law	505
20.1.2.	Public law	508
20.2.	Tax law	508
20.2.1.	Historical background	508
20.2.2.	Tax residence of foreign companies: Management test	510
20.2.3.	International cooperation and tax residence assessment	512
20.2.4.	Tax implications of tax residence	513

20.2.5.	Challenge of tax residence and anti-avoidance rules	514
20.2.6.	Tax residence and other taxes on companies	515
20.3.	Residence in (tax) treaties	516
20.3.1.	Russian DTTs and OECD MTC	516
20.3.2.	Definition of a resident	517
20.3.3.	Tie-breaker rule	518
20.3.4.	Limitation on benefits rules	518
20.4.	Tax implications of the cross-border change of residence	519
20.5.	Policy issues	520
20.6.	Personal position	522
Chapter 21:	Serbia	525
	Svetislav V. Kostić
21.1.	(Tax) residence in the domestic context	525
21.1.1.	Civil law, corporate law and other non-tax areas	525
21.1.2.	Tax law	529
21.1.2.1.	The general framework of corporate tax residence under Serbian domestic law	529
21.1.2.2.	Serbian specific anti-abuse rules targeting “non-resident legal entities from jurisdictions with preferential tax systems”	530
21.1.2.3.	Sourcing rules based on tax residence	532
21.1.2.4.	The concept of residence from sources other than the CITL	534
21.2.	(Tax) residence in an international (cross-border) context	534
21.2.1.	Residence in (tax) treaties	534
21.2.1.1.	Qualified residence criterion	534
21.2.1.2.	Liability to tax and anti-avoidance provisions	536
21.2.1.3.	Tie-breaker rules	537

Tabel of Contents

21.3.	Tax implications of cross-border change of residence	538
21.3.1.	Policy issues	539
21.4.	Personal position	541
Chapter 22:	Spain	543
	Andrés Báez Moreno and Juan José Zornoza Pérez
22.1.	(Tax) residence in the domestic context	543
22.1.1.	Civil law, corporate law and other non-tax areas	543
22.1.2.	Tax law	545
22.1.2.1.	General (alternative) criteria determining the residence of companies for tax purposes	545
22.1.2.2.	Detailed analysis of the criteria	547
22.1.2.3.	Tax implications of being considered a resident corporation	553
22.1.2.4.	Challenging tax residence: SAARs, GAARs and other ways used to question tax residence	553
22.2.	(Tax) residence in an international (cross-border) context	557
22.2.1.	Residence in (tax) treaties	557
22.2.1.1.	Criteria used in Spanish tax treaties for determining the tax residence of companies	557
22.2.1.2.	Tie-breaker rule in case of dual-resident companies	561
22.2.1.3.	Limitation on benefits clauses	563
22.2.2.	Tax implications of the cross-border change of residence	564
22.2.3.	Policy issues	569
22.3.	Personal position	570
Chapter 23:	Sweden	573
	Karin Blad, Eleonor Kristoffersson and Stefan Olsson
23.1.	Civil law, corporate law and other non-tax areas	573
23.1.1.	Lex societatis	573
23.1.2.	Challenging the residence of a company	574
23.1.3.	The notion of residence in other areas of law	575

23.1.3.1.	Corporate governance	575
23.1.3.2.	Insolvency law	576
23.1.4.	Other connecting factors in other areas of law	576
23.1.5.	Tax law	576
23.2.	Tax residence in an international (cross-border) context	582
23.2.1.	Residence in tax treaties	582
23.2.2.	Tax implications of a cross-border change of residence	585
23.2.3.	Policy issues	588
23.2.4.	Personal position	590
Chapter 24:	Switzerland Raphael Gani	591
24.0.	Introduction	591
24.1.	(Tax) residence in the domestic context	591
24.1.1.	Civil law, corporate law and other non-tax areas	591
24.1.2.	Tax law	595
24.1.2.1.	A legal entity	596
24.1.2.2.	Liable to tax under Swiss tax law	598
24.1.2.2.1.	Unlimited liability	600
24.1.3.	Tax fraud and lifting the corporate veil	605
24.2.	Tax residence in an international (cross-border) context	611
24.2.1.	Tax residence according to Swiss double tax conventions (DTCs)	611
24.2.2.	Implications of a cross-border change of residence	614
24.3.	Conclusion and future	616
Chapter 25:	Turkey Murat Yusuf Akın, Abdulkadir Kahraman and Ege Göktuna	619
25.1.	Tax residence in domestic context	619
25.1.1.	Corporate residence in civil law and corporate law	619
25.1.1.1.	Company types and “Turkish” companies	619

Tabel of Contents

25.1.1.2.	The TCC and the nationality of the companies	622
25.1.1.3.	Other codes and the nationality of the companies	623
25.1.2.	Corporate residence in Turkish tax law in general	625
25.1.2.1.	The concept of business headquarters	627
25.1.2.2.	The role of international administrative cooperation in assessing tax residence	629
25.1.2.3.	Tax implications of residence in domestic tax law	630
25.1.2.4.	Anti-avoidance measures	630
25.1.2.5.	Impact of residence for the application of other taxes in companies	632
25.2.	Tax residence in an international context	633
25.2.1.	Residence in tax treaties	633
25.2.1.1.	The meaning of “liable to tax” in the sense of article 4(1) of the OECD Model	634
25.2.1.2.	Anti-avoidance provisions	635
25.2.1.3.	Dual residence in tax treaties signed by Turkey	637
25.2.2.	Tax implications of the cross-border change of residence	639
25.2.3.	Policy issues	640
25.3.	Conclusion	640
Chapter 26:	Ukraine	643
	Danil Getmantsev
26.1.	(Tax) residence in the domestic context	643
26.1.1.	Civil law, corporate law and other non-tax areas	643
26.1.1.1.	International private law and corporate law	643
26.1.1.2.	Other non-tax areas of law	648
26.1.2.	Tax law	649
26.1.2.1.	Dominance of the incorporation criterion	649
26.1.2.2.	Determining the place of incorporation	650
26.1.2.3.	Separate units and permanent representative offices	651
26.1.2.4.	Indirect use of the POEM criterion	653
26.1.2.5.	Instruments of mutual cooperation	654
26.1.2.6.	Challenging the residence of a company	654
26.1.2.7.	Anti-avoidance rules	656
26.1.2.8.	Other taxes than corporate tax	657

26.2.	(Tax) residence in an international (cross-border) context	658
26.2.1.	Residence in (tax) treaties	658
26.2.1.1.	International treaties	658
26.2.1.2.	Applicable tax treaty practice	660
26.2.1.3.	Application of the term “liable to tax” in administrative practice, case law and literature	661
26.2.1.4.	Tax liability for residents and non-residents	662
26.2.1.5.	Applicable anti-avoidance provisions	662
26.2.1.6.	Legislative approach to dual-resident companies and place of effective management	663
26.2.2.	Tax implications of the cross-border change of residence	664
26.2.3.	Policy issues	665
26.2.4.	Personal position	665
Chapter 27:	The United Kingdom	667
	Luca Cerioni and Sandra Eden
27.0.	Introduction	667
27.1.	Tax residence in the domestic context	667
27.1.1.	Civil law, corporate law and other non-tax areas	667
27.1.2.	Tax law	670
27.1.2.1.	The elaboration of the “central management and control test” by the case law and the tax administration’s approach toward the test	670
27.1.2.2.	The administrative practice in challenging corporate tax residence	676
27.1.2.3.	The implications for tax residence under domestic law and its overall role	678
27.2.	(Tax) residence in an international (cross-border) context	682
27.2.1.	Residence in (tax) treaties	682
27.2.2.	Tax implications of the cross-border change of residence	688
27.2.3.	Policy issues	691
27.2.4.	Personal position and concluding remarks	693

Tabel of Contents

Chapter 28:	United States	697
	Omri Marian
28.1.	Corporate residence in the domestic context	697
28.1.1.	Civil law, corporate law and other non-tax areas	697
28.1.1.1.	Personal jurisdiction over corporations and the “minimum contacts” doctrine	698
28.1.1.2.	Subject matter jurisdiction and the importance of corporate “citizenship”	700
28.1.2.	Tax law	702
28.1.2.1.	Corporate tax residence under federal tax law	702
28.1.2.1.1.	Entity classification: “Check the box”	702
28.1.2.1.2.	Corporate residence: Place of incorporation	703
28.1.2.1.3.	The federal tax implications of corporate residence	705
28.1.2.2.	Corporate residence under state tax law and the “substantial nexus” principle	709
28.2.	Tax residence in the international context	711
28.2.1.	Tax residence under tax treaties	711
28.2.1.1.	Corporate tax residence and US tax treaty policy	711
28.2.1.2.	Corporate tax residence and treaty shopping: Limitation on benefits	712
28.2.2.	Tax implications of change of corporate residence	715
28.2.2.1.	The problem of corporate inversions and past responses	715
28.2.2.2.	Recent regulatory responses to corporate inversions	718
28.3.	Policy issues	721
	Part 3
	Appendix
Appendix		727