

Drama Education with Digital Technology

Education and Digital Technology Series

Edited by Michael Anderson, John Carroll and David Cameron

Contents

Notes on contributors	vii
Series editors' foreword	xi
Foreword	xiii
Introduction	1
1. Potential to reality: drama, technology and education David Cameron and Michael Anderson	6
2. When worlds collude: exploring the relationship between the actual, the dramatic and the virtual Julie Dunn and John O'Toole	20
3. Lip sync: performative placebos in the digital age Paul Sutton	38
4. Mashup: digital media and drama conventions David Cameron	52
5. Open the loop Peter O'Connor	67
6. Point of view: linking applied drama and digital games John Carroll	81
7. Audio drama and museums: informal learning, drama and technology Anna Farthing	97
8. Digital storytelling and drama: language, image and empathy Kirsty McGeoch and John Hughes	113

9.	'A blog says i am here!': encouraging reflection on performance-making and drama practice through blogs Jo Raphael	129
10.	Interactive drama using cyberspaces Sue Davis	149
11.	Digital theatre and online narrative Rebecca Wotzko and John Carroll	168
12.	Enter the matrix: the relationship between drama and film Miranda Jefferson and Michael Anderson	184
13.	Second life/simulation: online sites for generative play Kim Flintoff	202
	Afterword	222
	Index	227