

Contents

Preface	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction: For Whom the Love Works in Video Game Production?	1
1. The Unequal Ludopolitical Regime of Game Production: Who Can Play, Who Has to Work?	30
2. The End of the Garage Studio as a Technomasculine Space: Financial Security, Streamlined Creativity, and Signs of Friction	54
3. Gaming the City: How a Game Studio Revitalized a Downtown Space in the Silicon Prairie	73
4. The Production of Communicative Developers in the Affective Game Studio	89
5. Reproducing Technomascularity: Spouses' Classed Femininities and Domestic Labor	105
6. Game Testers as Precarious Second-Class Citizens: Degradation of Fun, Instrumentalization of Play	122
7. Production Error: Layoffs Hit the Core Creatives	141
Conclusion: Reimagining Labor and Love in and beyond Game Production	159
Notes	175
References	181
Index	197