

Table of Contents

About the Editors	vii
About the Authors	ix
Acknowledgements	xiv
PART I: Measuring the Immeasurable? The Challenges and Opportunities of Sustainability Research in the Social Sciences	1
1 Sustainability Research in the Social Sciences – Concepts, Methodologies and the Challenge of Interdisciplinarity Henrike Rau and Frances Fahy	3
PART II: Researching Local Lives: Experiences of (Un)sustainability among Individuals, Households and Communities	25
2 Household Analysis: Researching ‘green’ lifestyles, a survey approach Stewart Barr and Jan Prillwitz	27
3 Social Groups and Collective Decision-making: Focus group approaches Anna Davies	53
4 Local Lives and Conflict: Towards a methodology of dialogic research Mark Garavan	72
PART III: Comparative Research on the Sustainability Performance of Cities, Regions and Nation-states	89
5 Sustainable Development of What? Contesting global development concepts and measures Su-ming Khoo	91

6	Biophysical Indicators of Society–Nature Interaction: Material and energy flow analysis, human appropriation of net primary production and the ecological footprint Veronika Gaube, Helmut Haberl and Karl-Heinz Erb	114
7	Mapping for Sustainability: Environmental noise and the city Enda Murphy and Eoin A. King	133
PART IV: Time in Focus		153
8	Everyday Life in Transition: Biographical research and sustainability Melanie Jaeger-Erben	155
9	Time and Sustainability Henrike Rau and Ricca Edmondson	173
PART V: Current Developments and Future Trends		191
10	Researching Complex Sustainability Issues: Reflections on current challenges and future developments Frances Fahy and Henrike Rau	193
	Index	209