

CONTENTS

VOLUME I

Chapter I: The Study of the History of the Beliefs and Concepts of the Sages

The nature of the sources — the methods of modern Jewish scholarship — the studies of Christian scholars — the apologetic approach — Moore's work — the historical view of Yitzhak Baer — L. Finkelstein's attempt — Talmudic research.
pp. 1-18

Chapter II: The Belief in One God

The monotheistic concept — the recitation of the Shema and the Decalogue — the negation of idolatry — kōfēr bā-'iqqār [one who denies the primary principle of faith] — denial of Providence and the 'Epicurean' — faith and its meaning.
pp. 19-36

Chapter III: The Shekhina — The Presence of God in the World

God's names and attributes — immanence and transcendentalism — the Shekhina and wisdom — the use of 'Shekhina' in the Targums — in Tannaitic literature — the Shekhina as a separate light — the wings of the Shekhina — the 'confinement' of the Shekhina — causing the Shekhina to dwell in the Sanctuary — the Shekhina, which accompanies the people in exile — the departure of the Shekhina — the orientation during prayer — the Shekhina as hypostasis.
pp. 37-65

Chapter IV: Nearness and Distance — Omnipresent and Heaven

The use of Māqôm ['Place,' Omnipresent] in Tannaitic sources — the Amoraic interpretation of this epithet — the epithet 'Heaven' in the Bible and in Tannaitic literature — the interrelationship between the two epithets — the views ascribing a foreign origin to the epithet Maqom and their rejection — the disuse of the epithet Maqom and the disputation with the proponents of dualistic doctrines — the epithet ha-Qodesh and Qādôsh Bārûkh Hû — the epithet 'Elyôn'. pp. 66-79

Chapter V: The Epithet Gēvūrā [Might] and the Power of God

The concept of the power of the Deity — the power of the gods and fate in the Greek religion — the power of God in the Bible — the epithet Gevura in the Tannaitic sources — the concept of dynamis — the worship of images — the worship of kings — the might of the Holy One blessed be He — the benediction Gēvūrôt in the 'Amida' prayer — the polemic against the worship of kings — the destruction of the Temple and the emphasis on the Lord's might — Revelation and Torah as an expression of His might — the eschatological orientation in

CONTENTS

Paul's conception of Divine power — the dependence of Gēvūrā on Torah and repentance. pp. 80-96

Chapter VI: Magic and Miracle

The opposition to magic and sorcery — sorcery and idolatry — Philo's approach and the Tannaitic conception — the spread of magical practices among the common people — the influence of the Sages — the question of the legitimate miracles — miracles in the Bible — the miracles wrought by the early pietists and by Tannaim and Amoraim — miracles as an expression of the Lord's might — the religious significance of miracles — miracles as a means of sanctifying God's name — miracles and the law of recompense — miracles and the law of nature — miracles in the Halakha — miracles in the Christian faith — the difference between the miraculous tales in Rabbinic sources and the Evangelical stories — the tendency to restraint discernible in the miracle stories — the restriction of exaggerated eulogy in prayers. pp. 97-123

Chapter VII: The Power of the Divine Name

Oaths and adjurations by the Divine Name — the use of the Name in magical papyri — the use and enunciation of the Ineffable Name in the Temple — the corrupt teaching of the sectarians — Divine Names in amulets — Divine Names of twelve, forty-two, and seventy-two letters — the secret and tradition of the Ineffable Name. pp. 124-134

Chapter VIII: The Celestial Retinue

Angels in the Bible — the exegetical methods of the Sages in interpreting Scriptural passages concerning angels — the Guardian Angels of the Gentile peoples — Meṭaṭtron — the assignment of tasks to angels in Tannaitic and Amoraic homilies and the avoidance of corporeal expressions — the names of angels — Michael and Gabriel — Michael and Satan — Michael and Samma'el — the angels of the Revelation on Mount Sinai in the Tannaitic and Amoraic homilies — Israel's superiority over the angels — the Jewish-Christian polemic and the abolition of angel's missions — angels and individuals — the status and pre-eminence of man — Moses' superiority over the angels — the angels that accompany man — Satan's angels, the destroying angels, and the problem of evil in the world — parallels from the sources of the Persian religion — the angels in apocalyptic literature — its influence on Rabbinic literature — the serpent and Samma'el's rebellion — the sons of God and the fall of the angels — Satan the prosecutor and his task in the episode of Adam and Eve — Jacob's struggle — the angel of Death and the demise of Moses — the Celestial Retinue and the Celestial Bet Din — the opposition to the worship of angels and to the recitation of prayers to angels. pp. 135-183

Chapter IX: He Who Spoke and the World Came into Being

The work of creation — esoteric teaching — the approach of R. Ishmael and R.

CONTENTS

Akiba — the order of creation and the dispute between the School of Shammai and the School of Hillel — creation in thought and the doctrine of Ideas — rejection of the theory of creation from materia prima — mythological dicta at the end of the Tannaitic period and the beginning of the Amoraic period — anti-Gnostic polemic — the Torah and the creation of the world — the problem of the influence of Philo's thought — the angels and the creation of the world — the creation of light — the sequence of times and worlds that preceded creation — the world was created by an utterance — the dogma that God created the world.
pp. 184–213

Chapter X: Man

Man as the goal of creation — the body-nefesh relationship and the nature of the nefesh according to the Bible — the creation of man in the image of God — the three parts of man — the separation of body from nefesh and the doctrine of recompense — the creation of the body — the difference between Adam and his descendants — residual myths and legends, whose objectionable element has been removed, in the Amoraic homilies — Rav's teaching and the Iranian myth — the spirit of Adam — the formation of the child — man as a microcosm — the pre-existence of the nefesh — the treasure-house of souls — the problem of the integration of the nefesh with the body — is the embryo a living entity, or only 'its mother's thigh'? — the tractate of the creation of the child and the Platonic myth — the attitude to the body in the Hellenistic and Gnostic doctrines — the Tannaitic and Amoraic attitude and the parallelism in Zarathustra's conception — the dispute between the School of Hillel regarding the creation of man
pp. 214–254

Chapter XI: On Providence

Josephus' testimony concerning the concepts of the sects regarding fate and free will — the Qumran Sect's doctrine of fate — the term 'Providence' and its meaning — R. Akiba's teaching — the opposition to the ancient doctrine of fate and Paul's teaching of grace — reward and punishment in relation to Providence — emphasis on the principle of freedom of choice — the integration of man's free will and the ways of Providence in the School of R. Ishmael — Ben Azzai's doctrine regarding the reward of the precepts — the restriction of reward to the world to come — the restriction of free will to the first decision — the influence of faith on astrology and its restriction — the view of the last of the Amoraim — a complementary approach.
pp. 255–285

Chapter XII: The Written Law and the Oral Law

The term 'Torah' and its connotation — Torah and νόμος — the term 'Oral Law' and the unwritten law — the antithesis between letter and spirit — extreme allegorization and the anti-Paulinian polemic — the removal of the Torah from dependence on supernatural forces — Torah and prophecy — abolition of the difference between the Written Law and the Oral Law.
pp. 286–314

CONTENTS

Chapter XIII: The Commandments

1. Their Source and the Ways of their Observance

Torah and commandment — revelation and 'the autonomy of morality' — the difference between ancient sources and later Midrashim — theonomy and free will — the authority of the Sages — ways of keeping the commandments — beyond the requirements of the law and the quality of lovingkindness — option and commandment — Hillel's view. pp. 315–342

2. The Number, Classification, and Evaluation of the Precepts

The number 613 precepts and its source — the relative value of the precepts — reward as a criterion — light and grave sins — the sanctification and desecration of the Divine Name — the place of the Ten Commandments. pp. 342–365

3. The Reasons of the Precepts

The reasons for reward and the reason for adding the human factor — the test — the ritual-worship basis — symbolic reasons — educational reasons — measure for measure — the reasons of the precepts as an explanation for changes and additions — forgoing the discovery of reason — opposition to exploring the reasons of the commandments — the allegorization of the precepts in Hellenistic Judaism — the joy of the commandment — observing precepts for their own sake and otherwise — intent and observance of the commandments. pp. 365–399

Chapter XIV: Acceptance of the Yoke of the Kingdom of Heaven. Love and Reverence

The reading of the Shema and the recitation of 'Blessed be the name of the glory of His kingdom for ever and ever' — the reason for saying it in a low voice — the term 'fear of Heaven' — the episode of the Aqeda and the terms 'Fear' and 'love' — Philo's attitude to 'Fear of Heaven' — fear out of love — Job's worship of God — Job's indictments in the Targumim — in Tannaitic dicta — in the book The Testament of Job — Abraham and Job — the ways of fear and love — the teaching of R. Akiba — fear and love in Amoraic dicta. pp. 400–419

Chapter XV: Man's Accounting and the World's Accounting

1. Sin and Death

Adam's sin and its consequences — Ben-Sira's statements — original sin according to Paul — the views of the author of the Syriac Baruch and of Ezra IV — the decree of death and the giving of the Torah — death on account of the Serpent — death as punishment for the sins of the individual — the death of the righteous — the concept of death's power of atonement and its source. pp. 420–436

2. Reward and Punishment

Acts of an individual and collective retribution — the trial of souls after death and the judgement of man in his lifetime — measure for measure — crisis to which 'the doctrine of reward and punishment' is subject at times of religious persecution — the view of R. Akiba. pp. 436-444

CONTENTS

3. The Reason for Suffering

'Suffering is precious' — suffering as punishment — the suffering of love — inviting suffering — opposition to asceticism. pp. 444-448

4. The Attribute of Justice and the Attribute of Mercy

The conception of the attribute of punishment and the attribute of good in Tannaitic teaching — the attribute of justice and the attribute of mercy as hypostases — the names of God and His attributes — Philo's view — the popular conception — the view of Rabban Gamaliel — God's compassion as a reward for man's compassion — the views of the Amoraim — the struggle of the attribute of justice. pp. 448-461

5. The Power of Repentance

'Reward and punishment' and repentance — repentance in the Bible and its appraisal by the Sages — the nature of repentance — R. Me'ir and Elisha b. Avuya — enlargement of the sphere and scope of repentance by the Amoraim — specific days for repentance. pp. 462-471

6. The two Inclinations

Repentance and the war of the inclinations — the good inclination and the evil inclination — the means for waging the struggle against the evil inclination — the evil inclination identified with 'other gods' — the craving for idolatry — sexual desire — the survival of the human species — serving God with both inclinations — the stratagems of the (evil) inclination — the conquest and suppression of the (evil) inclination — the stories of Amoraim concerning the testings of the Tannaim — the prayers for the subjugation of the (evil) inclination — the attitude of the Sages to the problems of theodicy. pp. 471-483

7. The Righteous and Wicked

Who is righteous? — the dangers to which the righteous man is exposed — the legend of the righteous — the world exists through the merit of righteous men — their number — the birth of the righteous man — his extraordinary image and qualities — his influence on his environment — the righteous man and his generation — the decline of the generations — the merit of the righteous and its effect — the various views concerning the merit of the Patriarchs and the destiny of the nation — ancestral merit and the individual — the doctrine of R. Akiba — the opposition to ancestral merit and the deep-rooted belief in it — the living bestow merit on the dead — sons bestow merit on their fathers — the atonement of the dead through the living. pp. 483-511

8. Interpretation of Theodicy

The individual's accounting — the contradictions in the doctrine of retribution

CONTENTS

and the preservation of the principle of reward and punishment — theodicean methods of interpreting harsh Scriptural episodes — past events explained by later events — the selling of Josephus and the martyred Sages — ‘What have you to do with the mysteries of the All-Merciful?’ pp. 511–523

Chapter XVI: The People of Israel and its Sages

1. Election and Reality

The idea of election in the Bible — the derision of the Gentiles at the Jewish claim to election in times of oppression — the Sages’ replies to the sectarians — the answer they gave to their own people — the concept of election as a cosmic act — the twofold election — Israel chose its God — the choosing people became the chosen people — the nation’s destiny is determined by its attitude to its God since the acceptance of the Torah — the implications of mutual suretyship.

pp. 525–541

2. Election and Proselytization

The function of spreading Israel’s faith among the Gentiles — the effect of the destruction of the Temple — explanations of the Jewish people’s dispersion — the attitude to Christians and pagans — the struggle on two fronts — the laws governing the acceptance of proselytes — the attitude to proselytes in the post-Hadrianic period — the attitude of the Amoraim — the strength of the consciousness of election — its expression in prayers and benedictions.

pp. 541–554

3. Indictment and Defence of the Congregation of Israel

The attitude to the episode of the golden calf — the assessment of the work of the prophets among their people — the function of reproof and defence.

pp. 554–564

4. The Status of the Sages in the Days of the Hasmoneans

The cessation of prophecy — the Great Synagogue — Scribes and Sages — Ben Sira’s description — Joḥanan the High Priest — Simeon b. Sheṭaḥ — Shema’ya and Avṭalion.

pp. 564–576

5. Hillel’s Character and Work

Hillel and the Sons of Bathyra — the attitude to the Holy Spirit — the enactments of Hillel — his influence on the institutions of the Temple and Sanhedrin — his attitude to the masses of the people — the laws of purity and impurity — the differences between the associations of the Pharisees and the Essenes and the Qumran Covenanters — the changed meaning of the term ‘am ha-’areṣ and the consequences in the relationship between them and the ḥāvērīm [associates] — Hillel’s attributes and conduct.

pp. 576–593

6. The Régime of the Sages after the Destruction of the Temple

The School of Shammai and the School of Hillel — the Zealots in the period of the Revolt — the work of R. Joḥanan b. Zakkai — the episode of ‘Aqaviah b. Mahalalel — the dynasty of the Patriarchs of the House of Hillel — the struggle for freedom of Halakhic decision — the problem of the livelihood of the Sages — the clash between ideals and reality.

pp. 593–603

CONTENTS

7. The Struggle between Learning and Practice in the Creation of the Image of the Sage

The attitude of the Sages to rulership and the exercise of authority — the extreme approach of R. Simeon b. Yoḥai and the attitude of his colleagues — the relationship between Torah study and good works — the assessment of Torah as the supreme value — the reluctance to give Halakhic decisions and to act as judges and its causes — the goal of wisdom is penitence and good deeds. pp. 603–620

8. The Internal Relations in the Academies of the Sages

The desire to annoy — between praise and dispraise — friction due to competition for distinguished disciples — the discussions in the academies conducted in a free spirit — the creation of class consciousness — the exhortation to support the Sages — recognition of the dangers that beset the Sage — the test of the Sage. pp. 620–630

9. The Sages among their People

The dilemma of the relationship between themselves — the dicta against the 'amme ha-'ares and their significance — the question of pedigree — the marriage factor — recognition of the virtues of simple folk — action taken to draw them closer to the Torah and the commandments — the responsibility for the integrity of the Congregation of Israel as a whole — Israel as one people — the antithesis: Israel—the nations of the world. pp. 630–648

Chapter XVII: On Redemption

The terminology connected with the concept of redemption — the vision of the prophets of Israel — the apocalyptic literature — the belief in resurrection — the belief in the redemption of the nation and the country in the pre-Destruction period — the benediction for redemption — the blessings of the High Priest on the Day of Atonement — the conception of redemption in Sirach — the portrayal of redemption in apocalyptic circles — the Messianic document in The Psalms of Solomon and the antagonism to the Hasmoneans — the destruction of the Temple and the change in the conception of redemption — religious-national redemption bears a restorative character — redemption and repentance — the dispute between R. Joshua and R. Eliezer, the revolt of Bar Kokhba — R. Akiba's attitude to the revolt and the personality of Bar Kokhba — his opponents — the failure and its consequences — the penetration of the Utopian-apocalyptic concept into the circles of the Sages — realistic concepts and calculators of the End — the personality of the Messiah — his pre-existence — the Messiah's names — the suffering Messiah — Messiah the son of Joseph and Messiah the son of David — the negation of the image of a personal Messiah — God is the Redeemer — the absolute faith in redemption. pp. 649–690

VOLUME II

Notes

Chapter I: The Study of the History of the Beliefs and Concepts of the Sages	693
Chapter II: The Belief in One God	696
Chapter III: The Shekhina — The Presence of God in the World	701
Chapter IV: Nearness and Distance — Omnipresent and Heaven	711
Chapter V: The Epithet Gēvūrā (Might) and the Power of God	722
Chapter VI: Magic and Miracle	725
Chapter VII: The Power of the Divine Name	733
Chapter VIII: The Heavenly Household	741
Chapter IX: He Who Spoke and the World Came into Being	768
Chapter X: Man	784
Chapter XI: On Providence	801
Chapter XII: The Written and the Oral Laws	814
Chapter XIII: The Commandments	826
Chapter XIV: Acceptance of the Kingdom of Heaven Love and Reverence	858
Chapter XV: Man's Accounting and the World's Accounting	874
Chapter XVI: The People of Israel and its Sages	923
Chapter XVII: On Redemption	990
Indices and Bibliography
General Index	1013
Index of Sources	1032
Bibliography	1051
Supplement to the Second Edition
Index of non-Rabbinic Sources	1079
Corrigenda	1090