

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction: Ethical food restraint – choosing moderation	1
Anglicanism and anorexia	8
Self-moderation and social justice	15
1 Elizabeth Gaskell, ethical economics and ethical eating	23
Dietary abstinence and social empathy	25
‘Elegant economy’ and mutual restraint	33
Purposeful shared eating and hospitality	39
2 Christina Rossetti, spiritual growth and social justice	47
Rossetti’s materialist theology and fasting	48
Unity of the body	55
Liturgical practice	59
Social prophecy	66
3 Josephine Butler’s hagiography as social prophecy	77
The social and political influence of a saint	80
Catharine of Siena’s anorexic space	89
Britain’s gluttonous capitalism	98
Duty of the heart and body	102
4 Alice Meynell’s fasting and the health of the body	109
Meynell’s fasting and dietary restraint	113
Poetry as theology of the body	119
Defence of the Catholic social mission	126

Conclusion: One body	133
Public health and the Body of Christ	135
Self-moderation and the health of the nation	136
Bibliography	141
Index	151