

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	page xi
List of abbreviations	xiii
1 The socio-redaction criticism of Luke–Acts	1
1. Social and political influences on Lucan theology	1
2. Towards a socio-redaction criticism of Luke–Acts	2
3. The methodology of the social sciences	6
The comparative method	9
4. Objections to the application of the social sciences to the New Testament	12
5. Legitimation and Luke–Acts	16
2 The community	24
1. Luke’s audience – a Christian community	24
2. When and where	27
3. Jews and Gentiles in Luke’s community	30
Introduction: the case for a Gentile audience	30
The universalist theme in Luke–Acts	33
The incident at Nazareth (Lk 4.16–30) and pious Gentiles	34
God-fearers in Luke–Acts	36
3 Sectarian strategies	46
1. Introduction	46
2. The sociology of sectarianism: typology and model	47
3. Sectarian strategies in Luke–Acts	53
Church and sect	53
Sectarian responses to the world	58
From Jewish reform movement to Christian sect	65

4 Table-fellowship	71
1. Table-fellowship between Jews and Gentiles in Luke–Acts	71
2. Jewish antipathy to dining with Gentiles	73
The anthropological perspective: external threat and purity laws	73
Literary and historical evidence for the Jewish ban on dining with Gentiles	76
3. The attitude to table-fellowship between Jews and Gentiles in Galatians, Mark and Matthew	86
Table-fellowship in Galatians	87
Table-fellowship in Mark	89
Matthew and table-fellowship	91
4. Table-fellowship in Luke–Acts	93
The conversion of Cornelius	93
The Apostolic Council	97
Other instances of table-fellowship between Jews and Gentiles in Acts	99
The nature of the meal in Acts 27.33–8	101
Table-fellowship and Luke’s legitimatory purpose	105
5 The law	110
1. Introduction	110
2. The law in Luke’s Gospel	111
The infancy narratives	111
Jesus’ respect for the law	114
Jesus’ transcendence of the law	115
Jesus’ challenge to the law	117
Jewish paranomia in the Third Gospel	118
Luke 16.16–18	120
Lucan omissions of legal material	121
3. The law in Acts	122
Stephen and the law	122
Paul and the law	125
4. Conclusion	128
6 The Temple	131
1. The prominence of the Temple in Luke–Acts	131
2. Luke’s ambivalent attitude to the Temple	133
3. The explanation for Luke’s attitude to the Temple	135
Historical reality and Lucan redaction in Acts 6.1–8.3	135

Introduction	135
The identity of the 'Hebrews' and the 'Hellenists' in Acts 6.1	136
The expulsion of the Hellenists from Jerusalem	139
The conflict between Hebrews and Hellenists	141
Temple, God-fearers and Gospel	145
The attitude of Diaspora Jews to the Temple and the law	146
The Temple and the cult	148
Marginalized God-fearers in Jerusalem	154
The impact of the Gospel	157
4. Conclusion: Luke's redaction and the needs of his community	161
7 The poor and the rich	164
1. A theology of the destitute in Luke–Acts?	164
2. Luke's theology of poverty and its social setting	169
3. The rich and the poor in the Hellenistic cities of the Roman East	171
Social stratification	171
The experience of poverty	175
Conclusion	179
4. The Lucan version of the Nazareth pericope in its Hellenistic setting	179
The social strata represented in Luke's community	179
Luke 4.18–19 and the experience of poverty	180
Conclusion	182
5. The rich and the poor in Luke's community	183
The upper socio-economic strata in Luke's community	183
The poor in Luke's community	185
Conclusion	187
6. Luke's theology of the poor	187
Good news for the poor, grim news for the rich	187
The rich and the poor in 1 Enoch 92–105	189
Luke's attitude to salvation: its other-worldly dimension	191
Luke's attitude to salvation: its this-worldly dimension	193
7. Conclusion	197

8 Rome and the ancestral theme	201
1. Politically sensitive material in Luke–Acts	201
The Roman empire in Luke–Acts	201
2. Apologetic or legitimation?	205
An historical outline of the apologetic explanation	205
Problems with the apologetic approach	207
An analysis of the religio licita theory	211
Roman respect for ancestral tradition	214
The ancestral theme in Luke–Acts	215
Conclusion: political legitimation in Luke–Acts	217
Epilogue: community and Gospel	220
Notes	224
Index of biblical references	259
Index of secondary authors	267