

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Preface	xi
1 Introduction: “An Unprecedented Recession from Adult Life”	1
2 “Don’t Step on My Blue Suede Shoes”: Empire, Deterrence and the Origins of Dissent in Cold War America	14
3 Generational Politics, Fifties Freud and the “Fragmentation of the Oedipus”	37
4 The Parent-Apparent: “De-Parentification” and the Post-Oedipal Family in Tennessee Williams’s Cat on a Hot Tin Roof	62
5 Generation on Trial: Arthur Miller’s Theater of Judgment	75
6 Trauma, Mourning and Self-(Re)Fashioning in J. D. Salinger’s The Catcher in the Rye: Reinventing Youth in Cold War America	87
7 “Racing with the Moon”: Hiroshima, Nagasaki and the All-American Girl in William Styron’s Lie Down in Darkness	98
8 The End of Adulthood: Vladimir Nabokov’s Lolita	110
9 Jack Kerouac’s On the Road: “Oedipus Eddy” and “the Story of America”	123
10 Death’s Child: Lost Fathers, Bereaved Daughters and the Rise of Postwar Feminism—Rereading Sylvia Plath	133

viii Contents

11	The Comforts of Home: Generational Dialectics in Flannery O'Connor's Short Fiction	146
12	Conclusion: The Cold War, Vietnam, the Sixties and After	162
	Bibliography	179
	Index	193