

Contents

List of Illustrations	xiii
Abbreviations and Editorial Conventions	xv

Introduction: John Donne and the Conway Papers	I
--	---

PART I THE CONWAY FAMILY AND THE CONWAY PAPERS

1. 'At length I fell in to Imagination': Sir John Conway	27
2. 'An honest man, who knows more about the sword than the pen': Edward, First Viscount Conway and Killultagh	48
3. The Knight's Move: Conway and A Game at Chess	62
4. Fide et Amore : The First Viscount Conway's Legacies	79
5. 'What is a Gentleman but his pleasure?' Edward, Second Viscount Conway, and Killultagh	97
6. Booklets, Books, Ballads, and Birds: The Second Viscount Conway as Collector	114
7. The Curious History of the Conway Papers	133
8. Conceptualizing the Conway Papers	149

PART II JOHN DONNE, SIR HENRY GOODERE, AND MANUSCRIPT CIRCULATION

9. Donne's Verse Letters	175
10. Sir Henry Goodere, Poet and Scribe	196
11. Problematum miscellaneorum : The Problems and Biathanatos , 1603–1610	220
12. The Intelligence that Moves: Donne, Goodere, and Conway, 1610–1615	241

13. Textual Transmission and Court Patronage in the 1620s	264
14. Conflicts of Interest: Donne, Goodere, Conway, and Seventeenth-Century Patronage	280
Conclusion: Patronage and Manuscript Circulation	294
Appendix I: Conway and Goodere Family Trees	309
Appendix II: Literary Manuscripts in the Conway Papers	313
Works Cited	335
Index	373