

Contents

THE CRISIS OF REPRESENTATION 1914-1918

Matisse, the conflict between two realities	10
Picasso, the return to illusionism	12
Chirico, the mysteries of the subject	14
New York, the capital of the 20th century	16
Stieglitz and the advent of pure photography	18
Duchamp and Picabia, the abandonment of painting	20
The fascination of machinery	23
Man Ray, the spirit of free invention	25
Zurich Dada	26
The Russian avant-garde	29
Chagall and Kandinsky	30
The suprematism of Malevich, "wrenching the world from the hands of nature"	32
Real materials in real space	34
"Another order assigned to the laws of nature"	36
Affirming the autonomy of painting	38
Mondrian and the creation of De Stijl	40
Consequences of the war and the Russian Revolution	43

THE MOMENTUM OF CHANGE 1919-1924

Matisse and Bonnard, a new lyrical unity	47
Picasso, the return to the subject	48
A "purely Italian art"	50
L'Esprit Nouveau : art and science join hands	52
The rule and emotion	54
Picasso: "To find is the thing"	57
Léger, the alphabet of the modern world	58
From painting to film	60
Berlin, hotbed of revolution	62
Berlin Dada and photomontage	64
Cologne Dada, another dimension of collage	66
Paris Dada: "Beyond painting"	69
Hanover Dada, the invention of Merz	70
The assemblage	72
New forms of photography	74
The death of painting	77
Art changes purpose	78
"Our streets are brushes"	80
New ways of sculpture	82
The international of geometric abstraction	84
The picture breaks out of the frame	86
The Bauhaus: art and technics become one	88
Paul Klee, intuition and decision	91
Kandinsky, the role of teaching	92
The invention of design	94
Imagining the function of architecture	97
Light and movement into art	99
Expressive realities of the artist film-makers	100
Revolutionizing the tradition of typography	103
The advent of Surrealism	105

ART FOR LIFE'S SAKE 1925-1929

Paris, the rendezvous of Art Deco	112
The 1925 style	114
Repudiating "decorative art"	117
Functional art vs. spectacular art	118
Matisse, the truth of his own emotion	120
The changing face of realism	122
The New Objectivity	124
Picasso and Surrealism	126
Surrealism and painting	128
Automatic writing	130
Sand pictures and frottage	132
The assemblage	134
The Bauhaus in Dessau	136
The triumph of geometric abstraction	138
The invention of the environment	141
Functional architecture	142
The social background	144
The condemnation of Utopia	146
The theatre as a synthesis of the arts	148
Liberating sculpture from the mass	150
Photography
A new art of propaganda	152
Photographic realism	154
Photography as art... Art as photography	156
The Second Surrealist Manifesto	160
The question of representation	162
The objectivized form of desire	164

THE TIME OF TRIAL 1930-1936

Matisse discovers colour-form	169
From "Cercle et Carré" to "Abstraction-Création"	170
The break-up of the Bauhaus	173
When the State asserts its power and authority	174
The necessity for another realism	176
The affirmation of biomorphic forms	180
Sculpture in metal	182
Art and politics	186

DREAMS AND DECEITS 1937-1939

...no more ivory towers	191
Paris 1937, the World's Fair	193
Pavilion of the Spanish Republic	194
Freedom vs. the order of the law	196
Surrealism invents the environment	198
The return of the "subject"	200
The necessity of art	202
List of Illustrations	209
General Index	219