

Contents

General Editors' Preface	vii
List of Illustrations	viii
List of Contributors	xii
Acknowledgments	xiv
List of Abbreviations	xv
Introduction: Revolution by Night: Surrealism, Politics and Culture Raymond Spiteri and Donald LaCoss	1
1 The Politics of Surrealism, 1920–36 Robert Short	18
2 Towards a New Construction: Breton's Break with Dada and the Formation of Surrealism Theresa Papanikolas	37
3 Surrealism and the Political Physiognomy of the Marvellous Raymond Spiteri	52
4 Advertising Surrealist Masculinities: André Kertész in Paris Amy Lyford	73
5 Surrealism Noir Jonathan P. Eburne	91
6 Surrealist Racial Politics at the Borders of 'Reason': Whiteness, Primitivism and Négritude Amanda Stansell	111
7 Painting and Politics: Miró's Still Life with Old Shoe and the Spanish Republic Robert S. Lubar	127
8 Of Politics, Postcards and Pornography: Salvador Dalí's Le Mythe tragique de l'Angélu de Millet Jordana Mendelson	161
9 Surrealism in 1938: The Exhibition at War Elena Filipovic	179
10 For an Independent Revolutionary Art: Breton, Trotsky and Cárdenas's Mexico Robin Adèle Greeley	204

11	Aimé Césaire's Insurrectionary Poetics E. San Juan, Jr.	226
12	Hans Bellmer's Libidinal Politics Alyce Mahon	246
13	Attacks of the Fantastic Donald LaCoss	267
14	Failure and Community: Preliminary Questions on the Political in the Culture of Surrealism M. Stone-Richards	300
	Appendix I: Notes in the Hand of Léon Pierre-Quint Being the Record of a Conversation Théodore Fraenkel	337
	Index	341