Introduction 1

I.1 Argument structure 1

I.2 Our approach 2

I.3 Chapter synopsis 4

Part I: Background 9

1. Syntax 11

1.1 Introduction 11

1.2 Grammar as derivation 11

1.3 Syntax and Lexicon 12

1.4 Syntactic category 13

1.5 Displacement in syntax 14

1.6 Lexicalized and nonlexicalized syntax 17

Discussion points 21

Suggestions for further reading 22

2. Semantics 23

2.1 Introduction 23

2.2 Values 23

2.3 Meanings 24

2.4 Derivation, structure and decomposition 26

2.5 Entailment and analyticity 28

2.6 Indeterminacy 31

2.7 Notation 34

2.8 Semantic combination 38

2.9 Event semantics 41

Part II: Kinds of arguments	45
3. Arguments in Syntax	47
3.1 Introduction	47
3.2 Head and dependents	47
3.3 Argument and Adjunct	51
3.4 Lexicalist encodings	53
3.5 Nonlexicalist encodings	57
3.6 Optional arguments	61
3.7 Θ -grids	62
3.8 External and internal arguments	65
3.9 Consequences and correlates of argumenthood	67
Discussion points	74
Suggestions for further reading	76
4. Arguments in Semantics	77
4.1 Introduction	77
4.2 Functional arguments	78
4.3 Content arguments	80
4.4 Entailed role arguments	83
4.5 Participant arguments	84
4.6 Correspondence of syntax and semantics	89
Discussion points	91
Suggestions for further reading	93
5. Implicit arguments	94
5.1 Introduction	94
5.2 Implicit arguments	95
5.3 Existential and definite unrealized roles	99
5.4 Lexical idiosyncrasy	110
5.5 In the scope of quantifiers	112
5.6 Short passives	115
Discussion points	116
Suggestions for further reading	118
Part III: Analysis of argument relations	119
6. Thematic relations	121
6.1 Introduction	121
6.2 What are thematic relations?	121
6.3 Motivation for thematic relations	124
6.4 Objections to general thematic relations	130
6.5 Kinds of thematic relations	135
Discussion points	138
Suggestions for further reading	140

7. Agent and Patient 141
 - 7.1 Introduction 141
 - 7.2 Agents 141
 - 7.3 Patient and Theme 152Discussion points 160
Suggestions for further reading 162
8. Role iteration 163
 - 8.1 Introduction 163
 - 8.2 Role Exhaustion 165
 - 8.3 Role Exhaustion and events 169
 - 8.4 Time and place 170
 - 8.5 Comitatives 174
 - 8.6 The Theta Criterion 176
 - 8.7 The Principle of Interpretability 179Discussion points 182
Suggestions for further reading 183
9. Separation 184
 - 9.1 Introduction 184
 - 9.2 Detecting a difference 187
 - 9.3 Cumulative plurals 189
 - 9.4 Adnominal modals 192
 - 9.5 Complex predicates 193
 - 9.6 Idioms 194
 - 9.7 Argument structure alternations 199
 - 9.8 Alternations across categories 203
 - 9.9 Linking 205
 - 9.10 Syntactic implementation 206Discussion points 209
Suggestions for further reading 211
10. Event structure 212
 - 10.1 Introduction 212
 - 10.2 General motivations 213
 - 10.3 Impossible meanings? 216
 - 10.4 Projection and separation 218
 - 10.5 Adverbs 219
 - 10.6 Contra cause 225
 - 10.7 Event structure and thematic relations 228Discussion points 230
Suggestions for further reading 232
11. Linking and framing 233
 - 11.1 Introduction 233

11.2 Linking	233
11.3 Framing	250
Discussion points	268
Suggestions for further reading	270

Part IV: Case studies 271

12. Passives	273
12.1 Introduction	273
12.2 Passives and demotion	273
12.3 Framing	277
12.4 Representing the deep-Subject role	281
12.5 Implicit control of adjuncts	291
Discussion points	304
Suggestions for further reading	306
13. Resultatives	307
13.1 Introduction	307
13.2 Talking about resultatives	308
13.3 Lexicon versus syntax	310
13.4 Event structure and adverbs	313
13.5 The Direct Object Restriction	318
13.6 Argument sharing	322
13.7 Projection, separation and M	326
Discussion points	331
Suggestions for further reading	334
