

Table of Contents

1.
7	Introduction
8	Historical Perspective
8	The Both/And Culture
10	Six Hundred Years of Isolationism
13	The Big Five Construction Companies
15	The Emergence of Modern Japanese Architecture
2.
	Megastructuring:
23	Urban Structures for the Expanding Metropolis
32	Realization of the First Megastructure
37	Kisho Kurokawa: A Capsule Summary
39	Government Housing Employs Metabolist Principles
42	Masato Otaka: Hiroshima Housing
45	Sachio Otani: Kawaramachi New Community
49	Kiyonori Kikutake: Kata Housing System
51	Kenzo Tange & URTEC: New Urban Structuring Methods
53	The Passing of an Era
3.
	Architechnology:
55	A New Integration of Architecture and Technology
56	Closed versus Open Systems
62	Open Systems
71	Kisho Kurokawa: Capsules and Mixed Systems
82	Nakajima & GAUS: Mixed Systems Capsule Castle
85	The Techno-Aesthetic: A Facade of Technology
89	Everyman Architecture: The Industrialization of Bourgeois Japan
4.
	Form and Space:
93	Several Interpretations
105	Kimio Yokoyama: Devotion to a Religious Order
112	Fumihiko Maki: Contextualism—Physical and Cultural
130	Arata Isozaki: Consciously Mannerist
150	Minoru Takeyama: Northern Radical
158	Shin'ichi Okada: Son of the Big Five
5.
	Futurism:
167	Fantasy Versus Reality
169	Electrographic City
178	Computer City
184	Inflatable City
190	Floating City
192	Movable City and Instant City
196	Notes
198	Sources of Illustration
199	Index