

Contents

List of Contributors	v
Preface	vii

I

Introduction to the Applications of Attribution Theory

1	A Brief Introduction to Attribution and Attributional Theories	3
	Charles Antaki
	A. Introduction	3
	B. Attribution Theory: A Brief History	5
	The beginnings of attribution theory	6
	Two models of the attribution process	7
	The differences between actors' and observers' attributions	9
	Self-perception	10
	Summary of basic attribution principles	11
	Attribution theory: models of decision making	12
	C. Attributional Theories	13
	Attributional theories: models of cognitions affecting behaviour	14
	D. The Use of the Internal/External Cause Distinction	16
	E. Summary	18
	Acknowledgements	19
	References	19
2	The Role of Attributions in Psychological Treatment	23
	Chris Brewin and Charles Antaki
	A. Introduction	23
	B. Attribution Change as a Therapeutic Tool	24
	Changing attributions for other people's behaviour	26
	Misattribution therapy	28
	C. Attribution Change as a Therapeutic Goal	32
	The exacerbation model	32
	Maintaining behavioural change	35
	Cognitive models of motivation	37
	Some issues in attribution-based therapy	39

D.	Summary	41
	Note	41
	References	42
3	Philosophical Foundations of Attribution Therapies	45
	Richard Totman
A.	Introduction	45
B.	Internal v. External Attributions	46
	Ordinary language	47
	The legal system	48
	Philosophy	48
C.	Attribution Theory as Anti-empirical	49
	Attribution theory as relativistic	52
	Notes	58
	References	59
 II Psychotherapeutic Applications
4	Attributional Style Therapy	63
	Mary Anne Layden
A.	Attributional Style	64
B.	Self-esteem and Attributional Style	65
C.	Success, Failure and Self-esteem	67
D.	Attribution Therapy	69
E.	Attributional Style Therapy	72
F.	Final Comments	77
	References	80
5	Attributions and the Maintenance of Behavior Change	83
	Janet L. Sonne and Dean S. Janoff
A.	Introduction	83
B.	Empirical Tests of the Attributional-maintenance Hypothesis	84
C.	The Promotion of Self-Attributions in the Clinical Milieu	87
	Enhancement of the client's sense of self as object	87
	Enhancement of the client's sense of behavioral freedom	88
D.	A Case Study	90
E.	A Challenge for Clinicians	93
	References	95
6	Learned Helplessness and Attributional Interventions in Depression	97
	Christopher Peterson
A.	Introduction	97
B.	The Learned Helplessness Model	97
	Reformulation	100
	General therapeutic implications of the reformulation	102

	Changing attributions	103
C.	Weaving New Strands into the Web of Belief	107
D.	Conclusion: Attributional Theory and Attribution Therapy		111
	Acknowledgements	111
	References	111

III Medical Applications

7	Adaptive Aspects of Self-blame in Coping with Accidental Injury	119
	Chris Brewin
	A. Self-blame: A Help or a Hindrance?	120
	B. Two Aspects of Self-Blame: Stable v. Unstable Attributions		121
	C. Self-blame and Accidents	124
	D. A Study of Industrial Accidents	126
	E. Self-blame for Accidents and Effective Coping		129
	F. Implications for Clinical Practice	130
	G. Summary	132
	References	133
8	Attributional Aspects of Medicine	135
	Fraser N. Watts
	A. Introduction	135
	B. Lay Explanations of Illness	136
	C. Internal and External Attributions of Illness		138
	Psychological and organic attributions		140
	Attributional aspects of hypochondriasis		141
	D. Explanation and Coping	144
	Management of chronic kidney dialysis patients		146
	Management of asthmatic and diabetic patients		148
	E. An Attributional Framework for Medicine	151
	References	152
9	Attribution and the Management of the Pain Patient	157
	Anthony E. Reading
	A. Introduction	157
	B. The Psychological Basis of Pain	158
	C. Laboratory Research on Attributions	161
	D. Clinical Management of the Pain Patient	163
	The data base: understanding the patient's pain		163
	Detoxification	166
	Psychological methods of pain relief		168
	E. Summary and Implications	171
	References	172

IV Educational Applications

- 10 The Effects of Teachers' Behaviour on Pupils' Attributions:
a Review 177
Daniel Bar-Tal
- A. Introduction 177
  - B. Weiner's Attributional Model of Achievement-related Behaviour 177
  - C. Antecedents of Pupils' Attributions 179
    - Differences in pupils' personal dispositions 181
    - Differences in the information available to pupils 182
  - D. An Attribution Model of Pupils' and Teachers' Behaviour 183
    - The effect of teachers' behaviour on pupils' attributions 184
    - Verbal appeals 185
    - Instructions 186
    - Reinforcements 187
    - Verbal feedback 188
    - Direct reference to causality 189
  - E. Educational Applications 189
    - References 191
- 11 Expectancy  $\times$  Value: a Model of How Attributions Affect Educational Attainment 195
J. Mark G. Williams
- A. Introduction 195
  - B. Achievement Motivation, Test Anxiety and Performance 196
  - C. Attributional Models of Performance 198
  - D. Some Shortcomings of Attribution Theory 199
  - E. The Expectancy  $\times$  Value Model 201
  - F. Implications for Educational Practice 204
  - G. Concluding Remarks 207
    - Acknowledgement 208
    - References 208
- 12 An Attributional Approach to Hyperactive Behavior 211
Lee A. Chaney and Daphne Blunt Bugental
- A. Introduction 211
  - B. Research Variables 212
    - Hyperactive behavior 212
    - Attributions 212
  - C. Research Questions 214
  - D. Conclusions and Discussion 222
    - References 224

13	The Contribution of Attribution Theory to Educational Research	227
	Colin G. Rogers
A.	Introduction	227
B.	Perceptions in the Classroom	227
C.	Existing Research into Teachers' Perceptions of their Pupils	230
	The problems of classroom-based interpersonal perception research	232
	Particular problems with attributional research in the classroom	234
D.	The Role of Attribution Theory: Promises and Limitations	236
E.	From Attributions to Values	240
	References	243
	Subject Index	247