

Contents

List of illustrations	vii
Acknowledgements	viii
Notes on contributors	ix
1 Introduction: letters, writers and the historian Rebecca Earle	1
Part I: The letter collection
2 'Paper visits': the post-Restoration letter as seen through the Verney family archive Susan Whyman	15
3 The immigrant letter between positivism and populism: American historians' uses of personal correspondence David Gerber	37
Part II: Letters, the family and public life
4 Formative ventures: eighteenth-century commercial letters and the articulation of experience Toby L. Ditz	59
5 The sentimental ambassador: the letters of George Bogle from Bengal, Bhutan and Tibet, 1770–1781 Kate Teltscher	79
6 Letters, social networks and the embedded economy in Sweden: some remarks on the Swedish bourgeoisie, 1800–1850 Ylva Hasselberg	95

Part III: Women and the letter form

7	A woman writing a letter Carolyn Steedman	111
8	The power to die: Emily Dickinson's letters of consolation Daria Donnelly	134
9	'You let a weeping woman call you home?' Private correspondences during the First World War in Austria and Germany Christa Hämmerle	152
10	'Letters are everything these days': mothers and letters in the Second World War Jenny Hartley	183
	Bibliography	196
	Index	225