

Contents

	Introduction	Gabriel Josipovici	1
1	Reading: who is doing what to whom?	George Craig	15
2	Vitality of language in nineteenth-century fiction	Rachel Trickett	37
3	Towards a reading of Dombey and Son	Gabriel Pearson	54
4	Reading late James	Tony Inglis	77
5	Taking a nail for a walk: on reading Women in Love	Gāmini Salgādo	95
6	His master's voice? The questioning of authority in literature	Jeremy Lane	113
7	Difficult language: the justification of Joyce's syntax in Ulysses	Roger Moss	130
8	Figures of desire: narration and fiction in To the Lighthouse	John Mepham	149
9	The innocence of P.G. Wodehouse	Stephen Medcalf	186
10	The fictional topography of Samuel Beckett	Robin Lee	206
11	Muriel Spark and Jane Austen	Bernard Harrison	225
12	'But time will not relent': modern literature and the experience of time	Gabriel Josipovici	252
	Notes on contributors		273
	Index		275