

CONTENTS

Introduction. The Tough 'Un	page	7
The Sequence of Events		17
ONE THE INVENTORS		31
The Wonderful New Magic Lantern		31
The Memorable Winter of 1895-96		34
Robert W. Paul, the Universal Provider		36
The First 'Opus', Queen Victoria's Procession		37
TWO A SHOWMAN'S INDUSTRY		39
The Early Film Producers		40
Programmes to Suit all Tastes		44
THREE THE PEOPLE'S STORYTELLER		47
The Bijous and the Picture Palaces		47
The Devil's New Playhouse		49
The First Cinematograph Films Act		51
In the Doldrums		52
Charles Urban's Factual Films		53
FOUR HEPWORTH, BARKER AND JUPP		56
Came the Dawn		56
Resurgence		57
The First Integration		58
Searching for Something New		59
London as Hollywood's Rival		60
FIVE EUROPE GOES TO THE WAR AND AMERICA GOES TO THE PICTURES		62
Hepworth and Barker, without Jupp, in Wartime		63
Working too Hastily and in too Small a Way		67
Years the Locusts Devoured		68
'Adapted from the Stage Play'		70
Filming the War		71
Dearer Movies		73

WHERE WE CAME IN

SIX	THE BLACK NOVEMBER	75
	OF 1924
	Cecil Hepworth Vanquished	76
	George Pearson and the Betty
	Balfour Comedies	79
	Disaster at Covent Garden	80
SEVEN	GETTING TO GRIPS WITH
	HOLLYWOOD	84
	New Men take Over	84
	The Battle of the Quota	87
EIGHT	BREAKING OUT FROM
	ISOLATION	91
	A Fresh Outlook on the Continent	92
	Escaping from Self-enforced
	Isolation	94
	Great Britain's Lead with
	Actuality Films	97
NINE	THE LAST OF THE SILENT
	YEARS	99
	Benefiting from the Cinematograph
	Films Act	99
	The Dividing Line	102
	John Maxwell, the Ostrers and
	C. M. Woolf	103
TEN	THE FIRST OF THE 'TALKIES'	106
	The Missing Element	106
	London's First Commercial Sound
	Films	107
	From Blackmail to Henry the
	Eighth	109
	Other Years and Other Locusts	111
	Going to the Pictures on Sundays	114
ELEVEN	THE SECOND PHASE IN THE
	'THIRTIES	117
	Michael Balcon's Films for
	Gaumont-British	117
	'The Key Film in the History of
	British Cinematography'	120
	Cinemas make more Profits than
	Films do	123
	The Turn of the Tide	126
Conflict at the Top	127
Two Hundred Films a Year	128
'The Film in National Life'	130

TWELVE	SPECULATIVE FINANCING	133
	No Dividends	133
	Quota Quickies	135
	The German Invasion	135
	A New Cinematograph Films Act	136
THIRTEEN	THE END OF THE PARTY: THE LATE 'THIRTIES	139
	One of the Few Vintage Years	139
	Quality and the Big Time	141
	The Year of Disillusion	144
	American Producers in London	145
	The Last of the Pre-war Years	146
	Aesthetic Aspects of Documentary	148
FOURTEEN	EUROPE AT WAR AGAIN: AMERICA NEUTRAL	152
	In the Black Out	152
	Left-overs from the 1930s	153
	Good Intentions	155
	Forthright Propaganda	158
	London Can Take It	159
	Documentary to the Fore	160
FIFTEEN	THE LAST OF THE WAR YEARS	164
	The Rank Empire	164
	Limiting the Monopolies	166
	More Studio Productions	167
SIXTEEN	MELODRAMAS, TOUGH AND TEARFUL	172
	Del Giudice makes his Entrance	174
	December 1945, and a New Beginning	176
SEVENTEEN	MUCH LESS THAN WAS HOPE FOR	179
	Exporting British Films	179
	The Government is Firm with Hollywood	182
	Great Expectations Indeed	184
EIGHTEEN	SWEPT ASIDE IN THE FLOOD	187
	Arthur Rank's Rivals	187
	Four Films that will be Remembered	189
	Many Orchids for Miss Blandish	192
	Staggering Losses	192

NINETEEN	THE YEAR WHEN EVERYTHING WENT WRONG	194
	Great Britain's Most Profitable Cinema Business	194
	The Ealing Comedies	196
	'Eady Money'	197
TWENTY	ON THE WRONG SIDE OF FIFTY	200
	Is Hollywood Losing its Touch?	200
	More Anglo-American Productions	203
	Back to Documentary	204
TWENTY-ONE	LOSING THE CINEMA HABIT
	Films Now Go to the People	206
	The Big Screen and the Dwarf Screen	208
	Mixed Fortunes in the Overcast 'Fifties	209
	The British Comedians	211
	Box-Office Successes of the Decade	212
	All British, Part British and Just a Little Bit British	215
	The Documentary Movement's Lost Sense of Purpose	216
TWENTY-TWO	THE UNCERTAIN FUTURE	219
	Challenging and Exciting Prospects	219
	The Few Remaining 'Faithfuls'	221
	The Government and the Cinematograph Trade	222
	Organized Interests	224
	Fewer Films: Greater Earnings	227
	Films for the Family	228
	Index	231