

CONTENTS

List of Illustrations	vii
Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction: A Brief History of Literature and Journalism in the United States Mark Canada	1
1 Benjamin Franklin, Literary Journalism, and Finding a National Subject Carla Mulford	25
2 Walt Whitman's Journalism: The Foreground of Leaves of Grass David S. Reynolds	47
3 "Not feeling very well . . . we turned our attention to poetry": Poetry; Washington, DC's Hospital Newspapers; and the Civil War Elizabeth Lorang	69
4 The True, the False, and the "not exactly lying": Making Fakes and Telling Stories in the Age of the Real Thing Andie Tucher	91
5 Elizabeth Jordan, "True Stories of the News," and Newspaper Fiction in Late-Nineteenth-Century Journalism Karen Roggenkamp	119
6 Where the Masses Met the Classes: Nineteenth- and Early-Twentieth-Century American Newspapers and Their Significance to Literary Scholars Charles Johanningsmeier	143
7 Fame and the Fate of Celebrity: The Trauma of the Lionized Journalist–Literary Figure Doug Underwood	169

8	Ernest Hemingway in Esquire : Contextualizing Arnold Gingrich's Posthumous Portrait(s) of Man and Artist, 1961–73 John Fenstermaker	187
9	Stephen Colbert's Harvest of Shame Geoffrey Baym	209
	Notes on Contributors	231
	Index	235