

Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
Introduction	ix

PART ONE

Modern Poetry Is Prose (But It Is Saying Plenty) Lawrence Ferlinghetti	3
• Imaginary Cities: America Joyce Carol Oates	11
City Limits, Village Values: Concepts of the Neighborhood in Black Fiction Toni Morrison	35
Poetry and the Modern City Stephen Spender	45
The Poet and the City: Robert Lowell Helen Vendler	51
The Puzzle of Anti-Urbanism in Classic American Literature Leo Marx	63
New York from Melville to Mailer Alfred Kazin	81
• Cities of Mind, Urban Words: The Dematerialization of Metropolis in Contemporary American Fiction Ihab Hassan	93
Mythicizing the City Leslie Fiedler	113
Theater and Cities Richard Eder	123

PART TWO

The Language of the Streets James Baldwin	133
---	-----

Black Literature and the Afro-American Nation: The Urban Voice Amiri Baraka	139
Culture Confrontation in Urban America: A Writer's Beginnings Chaim Potok	161
A Double Life: The Fate of the Urban Ethnic Jerre Mangione	169
The City and I Pedro Juan Soto	185
Living with Change David Ignatow	193
The City as Battleground: The Novelist as Combatant Marge Piercy	209
The Child's Perception of the City Bruno Bettelheim	219
Borrowing and Lending: The Young Reader and the Library Joan N. Burstyn	233
Literature for Youth: The City as Heaven and/or Hell M. Jerry Weiss	239
A People's Paper for the Inner City John Holt	245
Notes on the Authors	253