

Contents

Introduction	1
I.1. Causa Tempus Locus: Motive, Time, and Place	1
I.2. Neoclassical 'Reported Action' and the Fabula/Sjuzhet Distinction	5
I.3. Inferring the Fabula in Shakespeare Criticism	13
I.4. 'This Accident is not unlike my dreame': Arguments and Episodes	17
I.5. 'Many Days and Many Places, Inartificially Imagined'	22
1. 'Quando?' (When?) in Romeo and Juliet	36
1.1. Shakespeare in Parts/Shakespeare is Pants?	36
1.2. 'It was the Nightingale, and not the Larke'	43
1.3. 'The very same book which Shakespeare consulted'	50
1.4. 'The true ground of all these piteous woes'	55
1.5. Juliet's Unconscious	60
2. 'Imaginary Work': Opportunity in Lucrece and in King Lear	70
2.1. 'This weaues it selfe perforce into my businesse'	70
2.2. Circumstances before the Emergence of Statistical Probability	76
2.3. Circumstances as Sources of Emotion and Imagination	79
2.4. Lucrece's Circumstances	86
2.5. Timing Is Everything: The Death of Cordelia	96
3. Where and How? Two Gentlemen of Verona and The Maid's Tragedy	107
3.1. 'Tant d'actes particuliers'	107
3.2. Where Should a Gentleman Spend His Time?	111
3.3. 'How did thy Master part with Madam Iulia '?	118
3.4. Marlowe, Lyly, Jonson	125
3.5. 'About y ^e How & Where Debate arose': The Maid's Tragedy	130

4. 'The Innocent Sleeper': Motive in Macbeth	142
4.1. Inwardness and Politics	142
4.2. Revisionist Readings of Macbeth : A Tale Told by an Idiot	144
4.3. Actus Secundus, Scena Secunda : 'Alacke, I am afraid they haue awak'd'	146
4.4. Comedy, Justice, and the Commonwealth	150
4.5. English and Scottish Constitutional Discourses	152
4.6. 'The enquirie of the kingis slaughter was quite omittit'	156
4.7. Hearke, who lyes i'th' second Chamber?	163
Conclusion	171
Bibliography	173
Index	185