
Contents

- Introduction: Of the Coming of the New Red Negro* 3
- 1 African-American Poetry, Ideology, and the Left during the 1930s and 1940s from the Third Period to the Popular Front and Beyond, 16
- 2 "The Strong Men Gittin' Stronger": Sterling Brown and the Representation and Re-creation of the Southern Folk Voice, 60
- 3 "Adventures of a Social Poet": Langston Hughes in the 1930s, 93
- 4 "I Am Black and I Have Seen Black Hands": The Narratorial Consciousness and Constructions of the Folk in 1930s African-American Poetry, 116
- 5 Hughes's Shakespeare in Harlem and the Rise of a Popular Neomodernism, 144
- 6 Hysterical Ties: Gwendolyn Brooks and the Rise of a "High" Neomodernism, 164

7	The Popular Front, World War II, and the Rise of Neomodernism in African-American Poetry of the 1940s,	180
	Conclusion: "Sullen Bakeries of Total Recall",	208
	Notes	215
	Works Consulted	255
	Index	277