

Contents

List of Figures	viii
List of Tables	ix
A note to teachers and parents	xi
Acknowledgements	xii
PART I: INTRODUCTION	1
Background and aims of the guide	1
Previous attempts to improve social and communicative deficits in autism	1
Limitations of traditional approaches to intervention	2
The normal child as a mind-reader	2
The importance of mind-reading: What do we use it for?	5
Making sense of social behaviour	5
Making sense of communication	6
Other uses of mind-reading	7
Mindblindness in autism	7
Examples from clinical experience	9
Can mind-reading be taught?	12
Approaches to teaching mental-state concepts	13
Overcoming problems of generalization	14
Outcome of the experimental study	16
For whom is the Guide designed?	16
The limitations of teaching approaches of this kind	17
The structure of the Guide	17
References	19
PART II: TEACHING ABOUT EMOTIONS	23
The five levels of emotional understanding	23
Level 1: Recognizing facial expression from photographs	24
Materials and assessment procedures	24
Establishing a baseline	25
Teaching procedures	25
Level 2: Recognizing emotion from schematic drawings	26
Materials and assessment procedures	26
Establishing a baseline	27
Teaching procedures	27

Level 3: Identifying “situation-based” emotions	28
Materials and assessment procedures	28
Establishing a baseline	28
Teaching procedures	29
General teaching principle	30
Level 4: Identifying “desire-based” emotions	79
Materials and assessment procedures	79
Establishing a baseline	79
Teaching procedures	80
General teaching principle	81
Level 5: Identifying “belief-based” emotions	130
Materials and assessment procedures	130
Establishing a baseline	132
Teaching procedures	134
General teaching principle	135
PART III: TEACHING ABOUT INFORMATIONAL STATES	233
The five levels of informational state understanding	233
Level 1: Simple visual perspective taking	234
Materials and assessment procedures	234
Establishing a baseline	234
Teaching procedures	236
General teaching principle	236
Level 2: Complex visual perspective taking	237
Materials and assessment procedures	237
Establishing a baseline	237
Teaching procedures	239
General teaching principle	239
Level 3: Understanding the principle that “seeing leads to knowing”	240
Materials and assessment procedures	240
Establishing a baseline	242
Teaching procedures	244
General teaching principle	244
Level 4: Predicting actions on the basis of a person’s knowledge	245
Materials and assessment procedures	245
Establishing a baseline	247
Teaching procedures	248
General teaching principle	248
Level 5: Understanding false beliefs	249
Materials and assessment procedures	249
Establishing a baseline	254
Teaching procedures	256
General teaching principle	258

PART IV: DEVELOPING PRETEND PLAY	259
The five levels of pretend play	259
Assessing and teaching pretend play	260
Suggested materials and play themes	260
Establishing a baseline	261
Assessing spontaneous pretend play	261
Assessing the pretend–real distinction	262
Teaching procedures	264
Increasing the level of pretend play	264
Teaching the pretend–real distinction	270
General teaching principles	271
PART V: FUTURE DIRECTIONS	273
Using a person’s direction of gaze	273
Using photographs	273
Using “cartoon thought-bubbles”	275
Joint attention and empathy	275
References	276
Appendix: Examples of record forms	277

List of Figures

1.1	The Sally Anne scenario (reproduced from Baron-Cohen, Leslie and Frith, 1985)	4
2.1	Photographic facial expressions of emotion (reproduced from Paul Ekman and Wallace V. Friesen, Unmasking the Face , 1975).	24
2.2	Schematic facial expressions of emotion (adapted from Hobson, 1989)	26
2.3	Nos 1–48 Pictures and procedures used in identifying “situation-based” emotions	30
2.4	Nos 1–24 Pictures and procedures used in identifying “desire-based” emotions	81
2.5	Nos 1A–12D Pictures and procedures used in identifying “belief-based” emotions	135
3.1	Materials and procedures used in assessing and teaching simple visual perspective taking	235
3.2	Materials and procedures used in assessing and teaching complex visual perspective taking	238
3.3	Materials and procedures used in assessing and teaching “seeing leads to knowing”	241
3.4	Materials and procedures used in assessing and teaching “true belief” understanding	246
3.5	Materials and procedures used in assessing and teaching “false belief” understanding (unexpected transfer tasks)	250
3.6	Materials and procedures used in assessing and teaching “false belief” understanding (unexpected contents tasks)	253
5.1	Which sweet does Charlie want? (adapted from Baron-Cohen et al, 1995)	274

List of Tables

1.1	The five levels of mental state teaching	15
1.2	Some principles underlying fundamental mental state concepts	15
4.1	A transcribed example of spontaneous play	264
4.2	Developing spontaneous play: example 1	266
4.3	Developing spontaneous play: example 2	268