

Contents

Chapter 1 —	Logic, knowledge, and the case for a dialectical system	1
Chapter 2 —	The beginnings of a system – the problem of a first concept – the initial categories: pure being, pure disjunction, determinate being and systematic unity	24
Chapter 3 —	Levels, rules, and domains	58
Chapter 4 —	The development of a system – time, change and individuality – pure process and determinate process	120
Chapter 5 —	Further development – unity and individuality – ideal universality and objective universality	171
Chapter 6 —	The completion of the system: systematic individuality – pure individuality – pure activity – dialectical individuality – ‘the absolute’	207
Chapter 7 —	Concluding remarks	241
Index		246