
Contents

Preface	v
INTRODUCTION: READING AND WRITING	1
Reading	2
Reading Critically	3
BARBARA LAZEAR ASCHER, The Box Man	5
Asking Questions	9
Meaning	9
Purpose and Audience	10
Method and Structure	11
Language	11
Writing	13
Getting Started	13
Subject, Purpose, and Thesis	14
Audience	15
Invention	16
Organizing	17
Drafting	18
Revising	19
1. DESCRIPTION	21
Using the Method	21
Developing a Descriptive Essay	23

Getting Started	23
Organizing	24
Drafting	24
Revising and Editing	25
E. B. WHITE, Once More to the Lake	26
Time dissolves when a father takes his son to the lake where he vacationed as a boy.
JOAN DIDION, The Santa Ana	35
A hot, dry wind transforms the author's city, causing fires and inciting the citizens to mayhem.
JUDITH ORTIZ COFER, Silent Dancing	40
Weaving together descriptions of dreams, memories, home movies, and conversations with her parents, the writer creates a vivid impression of her childhood in an immigrant family.
N. SCOTT MOMADAY, The Way to Rainy Mountain	50
On a trek to his grandmother's grave, this Native American writer revisits the landscapes of his people.
WRITING WITH THE METHOD	58
2. NARRATION	60
Using the Method	60
Developing a Narrative Essay	62
Getting Started	62
Organizing	63
Drafting	64
Revising and Editing	65
LANGSTON HUGHES, Salvation	66
The author recalls an evening of expectation and disillusionment in his thirteenth year.
ANNIE DILLARD, The Chase	71
In a vivid recollection, the author captures the glory of being chased by a motorist after pelting his car with a snowball.

MAYA ANGELOU, Champion of the World 77
 An author conveys the suspense of a historic boxing match that she vividly remembers from her childhood.

GEORGE ORWELL, Shooting an Elephant 82
 A dangerous elephant forced this well-known writer to make a difficult decision as a British police officer in Burma.

WRITING WITH THE METHOD 91

3. EXAMPLE 93

Using the Method 93

Developing an Essay by Example 94

Getting Started 94

Organizing 95

Drafting 96

Revising and Editing 96

PERRI KLASS, She's Your Basic L.O.L. in N.A.D. 98

A medical student ponders the significance of the jargon she must learn as part of her initiation into doctorhood.

ANNA QUINDLEN, Homeless 104

A journalist refuses to take the impersonal "big picture" view of homelessness, focusing instead on the details of living without a home.

DAVID SEDARIS, Remembering My Childhood on the Continent of Africa 108

A well-known humorist envies the distinctly unusual childhood of his partner.

BRENT STAPLES, Black Men and Public Space 115

An African American writer who likes to walk the streets at night relates the "alienation that comes from being ever the suspect."

WRITING WITH THE METHOD 120

4. DIVISION OR ANALYSIS 122

Using the Method 122

Developing an Essay by Division or Analysis 124

Getting Started 124

Organizing 125

Drafting 126

Revising and Editing 126

EMILY PRAGER, Our Barbies, Ourselves 128

Learning that a weapons designer helped create Barbie gives the author new insight into the world's favorite fashion doll.

MARGARET VISSER, The Ritual of Fast Food 133

A cultural observer shows how what we take for granted at an "ordinary" fast-food restaurant is the result of extraordinary calculation.

SCOTT RUSSELL SANDERS, The Men We Carry in Our Minds 138

Reflecting on the men and women he knew as a child, the author explores traditional gender roles.

WRITING WITH THE METHOD 1455. CLASSIFICATION 146

Using the Method 146

Developing an Essay by Classification 148

Getting Started 148

Organizing 149

Drafting 149

Revising and Editing 150

RUSSELL BAKER, The Plot Against People 151

The writer takes a humorous look at three kinds of everyday objects, all of which, he declares, aim to destroy the human race.

DEBORAH TANNEN, But What Do You Mean? 155

A linguist examines seven conversational rituals that are often the source of conflict between men and women.

- STEPHANIE ERICSSON, The Ways We Lie 164
 The writer shows that lies can be destructive, no matter how harmless they may seem.

WRITING WITH THE METHOD 174

6. PROCESS ANALYSIS 176

- Using the Method 176
 Developing an Essay by Process Analysis 178
 Getting Started 178
 Organizing 179
 Drafting 180
 Revising and Editing 180

- LARS EIGHNER, Dumpster Diving 182

Everything from fresh pizza to boom boxes can be found in trash bins. A veteran scavenger explains how the homeless and very poor manage to subsist on other people's waste.

- ANNE LAMOTT, The Crummy First Draft 186

Do you struggle with writer's block? This writer recommends quieting your inner voices and just getting words down, no matter how bad the writing seems.

- JESSICA MITFORD, Embalming Mr. Jones 192

Before his family may see him at rest, Mr. Jones undergoes a startling transformation at the hands of the undertaker.

WRITING WITH THE METHOD 201

7. COMPARISON AND CONTRAST 202

- Using the Method 202
 Developing an Essay by Comparison and Contrast 205
 Getting Started 205
 Organizing 206
 Drafting 207
 Revising and Editing 208

SUZANNE BRITT, Neat People vs. Sloppy People 209

Humorously exploring the differences between two personality types, the writer finds that "the distinction is, as always, moral."

BRUCE CATTON, Grant and Lee: A Study in Contrasts 214

Face to face at Appomattox, Ulysses S. Grant and Robert E. Lee clearly personified their opposing traditions. But what the two Civil War generals had in common was more vital by far.

NANCY MAIRS, Disability 220

A writer with multiple sclerosis calls for a change in the media's depiction of disability.

RICHARD RODRIGUEZ, Private Language, Public Language 224

As a bilingual child, the author inhabited two worlds: one public, where the sounds were strange, and the other private, where the sounds were intimate and comforting.

WRITING WITH THE METHOD 232

8. DEFINITION 234

Using the Method 234

Developing an Essay by Definition 236

Getting Started 236

Organizing 238

Drafting 239

Revising and Editing 239

JUDY BRADY, I Want a Wife 241

Someone to take care of the children, do the cooking, clean the house, entertain the guests—who wouldn't want a wife?

NOEL PERRIN, The Androgynous Man 246

The "he-man" is but one way to characterize maleness, says the author, and it's not his way.

GLORIA NAYLOR, The Meanings of a Word 251

To a young black girl, the word nigger clearly means something different when hurled by a white schoolmate than when spoken by family and friends.

AMY TAN, Mother Tongue 257

Exploring the “Englishes” she grew up with, the writer defines her sense of a mother tongue.

WRITING WITH THE METHOD 2659. CAUSE-AND-EFFECT ANALYSIS 267*Using the Method 267*Developing an Essay by Cause-and-Effect Analysis 270*Getting Started 270*Organizing 272*Drafting 273*Revising and Editing 274*MALCOLM GLADWELL, The Tipping Point 275

The writer finds a surprising reason for the sharp decrease in New York City’s violent crime.

BARBARA EHRENREICH, Cultural Baggage 282

Once embarrassed by her lack of specific ethnic identity, the author instead discovers a tradition even more valuable.

K. C. COLE, Women in Science 288

Why are so few scientists women? The answer, a science writer finds, has nothing to do with chance or ability.

STEPHEN JAY GOULD, Sex, Drugs, Disasters, and the Extinction of Dinosaurs 294

A science writer with a knack for clear explanation discusses three possible reasons for the dinosaurs’ extinction and chooses the most likely.

WRITING WITH THE METHOD 304

10. ARGUMENT AND PERSUASION 305

Using the Method 305

The Elements of Argument 306

Appeals to Readers 307

Ethical Appeal 307

Emotional Appeal 307

Rational Appeal 308

Fallacies 311

Developing an Argumentative and Persuasive

Essay 313

Getting Started 313

Organizing 316

Drafting 317

Revising and Editing 317

*A Debate on Capital PunishmentEDWARD I. KOCH, Death and Justice 319

With cool reason, the then mayor of New York City defends his controversial position in support of the death penalty.

DAVID BRUCK, The Death Penalty 327

A lawyer specializing in the defense of capital cases presents an impassioned rebuttal of Edward Koch's argument.

WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY, JR., Why Don't We Complain? 334

Being stuck in a sweltering train prompts this writer to speak out against the tendency to suffer small vexations in silence.

MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR., I Have a Dream 341

The eloquent and determined civil rights leader shares his dream of equality for all people.

VIRGINIA WOOLF, Professions for Women 348

As a female writer in the early twentieth century, this author had to overcome two daunting obstacles to her professional aspirations.

JONATHAN SWIFT, A Modest Proposal 356

An eighteenth-century satirist offers a bitter mock-solution to the plight of the poor in Ireland.

WRITING WITH THE METHOD 367Glossary 369*Index of Authors and Titles 382