

---

Contents

---

Acknowledgements	xiii
Introduction	xv

I GIBRALTAR AND MALTA, MAY–OCTOBER 1830 I

Reasons for Tour – Alroy and health – Disraeli's nervous illness – Debts and Vivian Grey – Raises money by writing The Young Duke – Improved health – Companion for the Tour – Meredith, a sedate young man – They sail from Falmouth – Nature of his Home Letters – Disraeli's family – Arrival in Gibraltar – Hospitality of Governor – Lawless state of Spain – Disraeli lectures a bore on canes – Visit to Cadiz, Seville and Granada – Disraeli mistaken for a Moor – Malta – James Clay – His yacht and 'Tita' – A revealing letter – Clay's sexual prowess and dissipated character – Disraeli's affected conduct in the Fives Court – His foppish dress – They sail to Corfu in Clay's yacht

2 CORFU AND ALBANIA, OCTOBER 1830 27

Condition of Corfu – Rebellion in Albania – Disraeli's plan to join Grand Vizier's forces – His pro-Turk sentiments – His contempt for Greeks – Plan frustrated by Turkish victory – Bears a message from Governor of Corfu – Greek war of independence – Atrocious conduct on each side – The trio sail to Prevesa and Salora – Overland journey to

Yanina – They get drunk with a Bey on the way – Desolate state of Yanina – Disraeli fascinated by oriental glamour – Audience with Grand Vizier – His debauched son – Return to Prevesa

3 GREECE AND CONSTANTINOPLE,
OCTOBER 1830–JANUARY 1831 43

Greek situation in 1830 – Voyage along coast of Hellas and Morea – Excursions from Nauplion – Crown of Greece – Athens and the Acropolis – Wild boar and honey – Vermin – Constantinople – Nature of Turkish rule – Its sloth, cruelty and incompetence – Its capacity for survival – Affability of British Ambassador – Open invitation to dinner and picnic – Meredith goes to Bithynian mountains – Disraeli studies Galignani's Messenger – Description of Constantinople and the Sultan – Perfect climate – Lasting effect of his Turkish experience

4 THE HOLY CITY, JANUARY–MARCH 1831 59

Disraeli and Clay sail to Smyrna – Meet up with Meredith – He separates again – Cyprus – Jaffa – The orientalized Venetian Damiani – An excellent dinner – Journey to Jerusalem – Perils of travel – Disraeli's impression of the city from Mount of Olives – Condition of Jerusalem at this time – St Salvador – Clarke's description – Holy Sepulchre – Mosque of Omar – Politico-religious situation in Palestine – Moslem, Jewish and Christian quarters in Jerusalem – Disraeli not a 'Jew' – Christian feuds – Tancred – Mehemet Ali's conquest of Syria – the Anglican Bishopric of Jerusalem

5 THE LAND OF PRIESTCRAFT AND PYRAMIDS,
MARCH–OCTOBER 1831 79

Disraeli and Clay in Alexandria – Meredith rejoins them – Egyptian recent history – Napoleon’s expedition – Triumph of Mehemet Ali – Political news from England – Clay and ‘Tita’ ill – Disraeli’s excellent health – Lives à la Turque – Loses his best servant – News from home – Death of ‘Max’ and Isaac D’Israeli’s epitaph – Journey from Alexandria to Cairo – Three week voyage up Nile – Terrors of a ‘Simoom’ – Splendours of Thebes – Audiences with Mehemet Ali – Moral drawn by Disraeli – Acquaintance-ship with Botta – His ‘curious’ letters – Meredith dies of smallpox – Disraeli returns to England – The Henry Stanley imbroglio – Disraeli’s innocence – ‘A course of mercury’

6 THE AFTERMATH 103

Effects on Disraeli – Improvement in health – Importance of Jerusalem – His interest in the ‘Court Jews’ of the Near East – Effect on his novels – Passages in Contarini Fleming – Rise of Iskander – Significance of Alroy – Disraeli’s ‘ideal ambition’ – Alroy, symbol of an alien rising to the top? – Tancred – Description of the story – Disraeli’s idea of the Church – Tancred’s determination to see the Holy Land – Horror of his family – Efforts to stop him – His experiences in Palestine – A bathetic ending – Disraeli’s ambiguous status – Position of Jews in England – Not persecuted but not liked – Disraeli creates myth of a superior race – Compensation for coming from the fringe – A problem of identity – Disraeli and Zionism – A curious conversation with Lord Stanley in 1851 – A dream? – ‘The haunting voice of the prophets’

Index 135