

Contents

Transcription Conventions	vii
Preface	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
1. Introduction	1
Preliminary Definitions	1
Phenomena To Be Investigated	9
Relevance of This Research to Other Lines of Study	11
Previous Research on the Turn and Its Constituents	15
Gaze	29
Data	33
Transcription	46
2. Achieving Mutual Orientation at Turn Beginning	55
The Apparent Disorderliness of Natural Speech	55
Procedures for Securing the Gaze of a Hearer	60
Criteria for Choice between Restarts and Pauses	68
Quantitative Description	77
Gaze Withdrawal in Midturn	86
Securing the Gaze of Multiple Recipients	89
Modifying Gaze and Talk to Achieve Appropriate Mutual Gaze	91
Conclusion	93

3. Notes on the Organization of Engagement	95
Engagement Displays	95
Disengagement	98
Entering Disengagement	101
Some Alternative Possibilities	108
Talk within Disengagement	113
Selecting from Coparticipation Alternatives	116
Accounting for Withdrawal	123
Conclusion	124
4. Modifying Units of Talk to Coordinate Their Production with the Actions of a Recipient	127
Lengthening Units by Adding to Their Ends and Middles	127
Changing the Emerging Structure of the Speaker's Sentence	130
Adding Segments Repetitively	135
The Use of Repairs to Lengthen a Unit	140
Maintaining Focus on Talk	142
Changing the Length and Meaning of Nonvocal Units	144
Summary and Conclusion	147
5. Designing Talk for Different Types of Recipients	149
Requesting the Aid of a Knowing Recipient	149
Talk in the Presence of a Knowing Recipient	156
Discovering New News	159
Conclusion	166
6. Conclusion	167
Appendix
Data Sources	175
References	179
Subject Index	191