
Contents

Preface	xi
1. The Problem of Philosophical Diversity	3
1. The Strife of Systems	3
2. The Problem Is Itself a Focus of Diversity	6
3. The Untenability of the Platonic Ideal	9
4. Is Disagreement an Illusion?	13
5. A Fatal Flaw?	15
2. Philosophy and Paradox: The Pivotal Role of Aporetic Clusters	17
1. The Task of Philosophy	17
2. Antinomies and Cognitive Overcommitment	21
3. How Apory Engenders a Diversity of Resolutions	25
4. Antinomies Structure the Issues	28
5. Can Different Schools Debate the Same Issues?	31
6. Consequences of Incommensurability	34
7. Why Not Simply "Live with Inconsistency"? The Imperative of Cognitive Rationality	38
3. Why Antinomies Pervade Philosophy	45
1. Philosophical Concepts Are Fact Coordinated	45
2. Clarificatory Pressures and Antinomy	49
3. Fact-Coordinated Concepts Resist Purely Theoretical Clarification	52
4. Philosophy Cannot Abandon the Concepts of Presystemic Experience	57
5. Philosophy and the "Limits of Experience"	60
4. Escaping Inconsistency via Distinctions	64
1. Removing Inconsistency Through Curtailments	64
2. The Role of Distinctions	65
3. Dialectical Development	69
4. A Historical Illustration	70

THE STRIFE OF SYSTEMS

Contents

5. Intimations of Imperfection 72
6. Some Important Forms of Philosophical Inventiveness 75

5. Developmental Dialectics 78
 1. The Convergence of Traditions 78
 2. The Growth of Complexity and its Dialectical Ramifications 80
 3. A Glance Backwards: Hegel and Herbart 84
 4. The Structure of Philosophical History 85
 5. Sic Transit 88
 6. The Burden of History 90

6. Cognitive Values and Antinomy Resolution 95
 1. The Problem of Evaluative Selection 95
 2. The Pivotal Role of Analogy and the Role of Cognitive Values 98
 3. Philosophizing Hinges on Cognitive Evaluation 105
 4. The Loss of Objectivity 111

7. Oriental Pluralism: The Inevitability of Value Diversity 116
 1. Doctrinal Diversity Reflects a Diversity of Values 116
 2. The Import of Oriental Pluralism 122
 3. The Inevitability of "Schools of Thought" and the Unattainability of Consensus 125
 4. Whence Cognitive Values? The Key Role of "Experience" 129
 5. Are Philosophical Problems Pseudoproblems? 132
 6. The Persistence of Conflict 133
 7. A Review of the Argumentation 137

8. The Range of Reason 139
 1. The Infeasibility of a "Neutral" Basis of Philosophical Appraisal 139
 2. Against Indifferentism: Oriental Pluralism Does Not Make the Choice Among Positions Into "a Mere Matter of Taste" 145
 3. Does Oriental Pluralism Support Irrationalism? 151
 4. Pluralism and the Impetus of Reason 154
 5. The Rational Imperative 156

9. What Oriental Pluralism Means for Philosophy 159
 1. The Individual and the Community 159
 2. In Philosophy We Cannot "Rise Above the Battle" 160
 3. Is Philosophy a Guide to Life? 161
 4. Are Orientationally Bound Positions Worth Having? 165

5.	Does the Relativity of Philosophical Claims Undermine the Worth of the Enterprise?	168
6.	The Values Underlying the Present Account Itself	170
10.	Truth and Reality: Ramifications of Relativism	173
1.	Views Regarding Our Cognitive Access to Reality	173
2.	Where Orientational Pluralism Stands	177
3.	Against Absolutism	179
4.	Does Its Relativism Undercut Orientational Pluralism Itself?	180
5.	The Pursuit of Truth	186
6.	Relativism and the Problem of Protagoras	191
7.	Does Orientational Pluralism Mean We Must Abandon the Pursuit of Truth?	196
11.	Is There Progress in Philosophy? The Problem of Unattainable Consensus	202
1.	The Complexity of the Question in the Absence of Consensus	202
2.	The Balance Sheet: Technical vs. Doctrinal Progress	203
3.	Abandoning Consensus as a Prime Desideratum	207
4.	The Contrast of Scientific Consensus	210
5.	Progress in the Absence of Consensus	217
6.	Is Consensus Dispensable?	219
12.	Reactions to Pluralism	221
1.	An Inventory of Responses	221
2.	Scepticism	224
3.	Arationalism	230
4.	Historical Convergentism	233
5.	Rationalistic Doctrinalism in Its Absolutistic and Orientational Versions	235
6.	Syncretism: Against the Averroist Theory of Multiple Truth	236
7.	Coda	238
13.	More on Scepticism and Syncretism	241
1.	The Kinship of Scepticism and Syncretism	241
2.	Agnostic Scepticism	241
3.	Scepticism in Its Neo-Hermeneutic Guise	245
4.	Why Not Abandon Philosophy? A Reply to the Sceptic	248
5.	Syncretism	252
6.	A Critique of Syncretism	257
7.	The Flight from Commitment	258
14.	Prescriptive Versus Descriptive Metaphilosophy	261
1.	Modes of Metaphilosophy	261
2.	Orientational Pluralism is Not at Odds with Doctrinal Commitment	265

THE STRIFE OF SYSTEMS

Contents

- 3. On Replacing Philosophy with Its Own History 267
- 4. Does Orientational Pluralism in Metaphilosophy Carry
Lessons for Philosophy Itself? 271

Name Index 279

Subject Index 282