

GENDER AND GENRE

ESSAYS ON DAVID MAMET

EDITED BY
CHRISTOPHER C. HUDGINS AND LESLIE KANE

palgrave

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction	1
Mamet's Three Children's Plays : Where the Wilder Things Are Thomas P. Adler	15
Plowing the Buffalo, Fucking the Fruits: (M)others in American Buffalo and Speed-the-Plow Janet V. Haedicke	27
Disguise in Love: Gender and Desire in House of Games and Speed-the-Plow Steven Price	41
Prophecy and Parody in Edmond Richard Brucher	61
Demotic Male Desire and Female Subjectivity in David Mamet: The Split Space of the Women of Edmond Imtiaz Habib	77
Oleanna , or, The Play of Pedagogy Robert Skloot	95
A Few Good Men: Collusion and Violence in Oleanna Kellie Bean	109
Women on the Verge, Unite! Karen C. Blansfield	125
"It's the way that you are with your children": The Matriarchal Figure in Mamet's Late Work Leslie Kane	143

Reinscribing "the Fairy": The Knife and the Mystification of Male Mythology in The Cryptogram Linda Dorff	175
Mamet's Novelistic Voice Ilkka Joki	191
"A small price to pay": Superman, Metafamily, and Hero in David Mamet's Oedipal House of Games Christopher C. Hudgins	209
Man Without a Gun: Mamet, Masculinity, and Mystification Diane M. Borden	235
Contributors	255
Index	259