

CONTENTS

|  |           |
|--|-----------|
| PREFACE   | xi |
| I. CONCEPTUALISTIC IDEALISM   | 1  |
| 1. Stagesetting  | 1         |
| 2. The Role of a Conceptual Framework  | 3         |
| 3. The 'Standard Conceptual Scheme'  | 6         |
| 4. The Basis of Mind-Involvement   | 9         |
| 5. An Immediate Objection  | 13        |
| 6. The Nature of Conceptual Mind-Involvement   | 15        |
| 7. Conceptual Idealism   | 24        |
| II. THE ONTOLOGY OF UNREALIZED POSSIBILITY: A CONCEPTUALISTIC THEORY OF THE MERELY POSSIBLE | 27 |
| 1. Preliminaries   | 27        |
| 2. The Ontological Status of Nonexistent Possibles   | 29        |
| 3. Objections and Replies  | 34        |
| 4. The Linguistic Foundations of Unrealized Possibilities  | 39        |
| 5. Historical Retrospect   | 44        |
| III. POSSIBILITY AS MIND-INVOLVING  | 46 |
| 1. Introduction  | 46        |
| 2. The Mind-Involvement Thesis   | 47        |
| 3. Some Objections   | 51        |
| 4. The 'Mind-Dependency' at Issue is Conceptual  | 54        |
| 5. A Problem of Circularity  | 56        |
| IV. LAWFULNESS AS MIND-INVOLVING  | 58 |
| 1. What is a Universal Law? The Nature of Lawfulness   | 58        |

viii CONTENTS

|  |     |
|--|-----|
| 2. Lawfulness as Mind-Involving  | 69  |
| 3. Causality as Mind-Involving   | 76  |
| 4. A Seeming Circularity   | 77  |
|    |     |
| V. THE IMPUTATIONAL THEORY OF LAWS   | 81  |
| 1. The Problem of the Source of Nomic Necessity: The Insufficiency of Evidence | 81  |
| 2. Lawfulness as Imputation  | 82  |
| 3. The Warrant for Imputation  | 86  |
| 4. The Purported Anthropomorphism of Lawfulness                                | 90  |
| 5. The Heritage of Hume and Kant   | 92  |
| 6. Does the Success of Science Invalidate this Position?                       | 93  |
| 7. Imputations Reconsidered  | 95  |
|    |     |
| VI. PARTICULARITY AS MIND-INVOLVING  | 99  |
| 1. Introduction  | 99  |
| 2. The Problem of Identification   | 99  |
| 3. Identifiability vs. Identification  | 102 |
| 4. A Further Aspect of the Mind-Involvement of 'Things'                        | 106 |
| 5. The Role of Mind Appraised  | 108 |
| 6. Some Objections   | 110 |
| 7. Our View Not Immaterialism  | 112 |
| 8. The Problem of 'The Thing in Itself'  | 114 |
|    |     |
| VII. THE MIND-DEPENDENCY OF TIME AND SPACE                                     | 119 |
| PART I: TIME   |     |
| 1. The Thesis  | 119 |
| 2. An Objection  | 119 |
| 3. Full-Blooded Time vs. Bare Temporality                                      | 120 |
| 4. The Mind-Dependency of Time (i.e., Full-Blooded Time)                       | 122 |

|  |     |
|--|-----|
| 5. Some Objections   | 127 |
| 6. The Mind-Dependency of Time Not Psychological                           | 132 |
| PART II: SPACE   |     |
| 7. The Mind-Dependency of Space  | 134 |
| 8. Quantity and Measurement  | 137 |
| VIII. THE MIND-INVOLVEMENT OF THE PROPERTIES OF REAL PARTICULARS           | 139 |
| 1. Groundwork  | 139 |
| 2. Empirical Properties as Mind-Dependent                                  | 141 |
| 3. An Objection  | 146 |
| 4. Postscript  | 148 |
| IX. AN IDEALIST THEORY OF NATURE   | 151 |
| 1. Stagesetting  | 151 |
| 2. A Critique of Counterpart Realism                                       | 153 |
| 3. Conceptual Noomorphism  | 155 |
| 4. Transactionism  | 158 |
| 5. The Concept of Reality 'An Sich'  | 161 |
| 6. The Leibnizian Perspective: 'Our Reality' as Defined Intra-Phenomenally | 166 |
| 7. Concept-Darwinism as a Pragmatic Basis of Legitimacy                    | 171 |
| X. IDEALISTIC THEORY OF MIND   | 175 |
| 1. Mind as Basic   | 175 |
| 2. An Idealist View of Mind  | 176 |
| 3. The Role of Imputation  | 180 |
| 4. The Noomorphic Conception of Mind                                       | 184 |
| 5. Idealism and Materialism: Mind and the Causal Order                     | 186 |
| Conclusion: A SUMMARY OVERVIEW   | 195 |
| NAME INDEX   | 199 |
| SUBJECT INDEX  | 201 |