

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Chapter ½: Setting Up The Terms.....	1
0.1 Introduction.....	1
0.2 Philosophical Psychology.....	1
0.3 Meta-Psychology.....	2
0.4 Metaphysical Psychology and Rational Psychology.....	4
0.41 Rational Psychology.....	5
0.42 Terms Today.....	6
0.5 Philosophical Anthropology.....	7
Chapter One: Philosophical Anthropology vs. Scientific Psychology.....	9
1.1 The Levels of Abstraction.....	9
1.11 The Level of the "Human Sciences".....	9
1.12 The Level of the Phenomenologist.....	10
1.13 The Ontological Level.....	11
1.2 Characteristics of the Scientific Attitude on Psychology.....	12
1.21 Limitations of the Descriptive Knowledge of Behaviour.....	12
1.211 Inherent Limit on Modern Science.....	12
1.212 The Inherent Limit on Scientific Psychology.....	13
1.22 Unifying Results in Science.....	14
1.221 The Unified Results in General Science....	14
1.222 Unifying Results in Psychology.....	16
1.3 Why We Need a Philosophy of Psychology....	17
1.31 Psychology and Prepsychological Understanding.....	18
1.32 Psychological Facts and Essences.....	20
1.321 Experimental Psychology Delimited.....	20
1.322 The Role of Essences in Understanding the Facts.....	22
1.323 Essence and Meaning.....	23
1.33 Science and the "Natural" Consciousness...	24
1.331 How To Study the Mind.....	26
1.4 Autonomy and Symbiosis: Experimental Psychology and Philosophical Anthropology.....	27
1.41 The Dependence of the Philosopher Upon Psychology.....	27
1.42 The Dependence of the Psychologist Upon Philosophy.....	30
1.5 Philosophical Anthropology Today.....	32
1.51 The Mind-Body Problem.....	32
1.52 Man An An Interpersonal Being.....	32

1.53	Man as Free.....	33
1.54	Man as Preconscious and Unconscious.....	33
1.541	Phrasing The Question.....	34
1.542	The Role of Physiology?.....	34
1.543	Psychoanalytical Philosophy Relations.....	34
1.544	Distinctions.....	34
1.55	Ontology vs. Phenomenology.....	34
1.551	The Thomistic Approach.....	35
1.552	The Kantian Approach.....	36
1.553	The Phenomemological Approach.....	36
1.554	Consciousness and Dualism.....	36
1.555	Phenomenology and Empiricism.....	38

Chapter Two: One-Sided Conceptions of Man vs.

	Phenomenological Reductionism.....	39
2.0	Dualism and Monism in Human Experience.....	39
2.1	The Materialistic Image of the Human.....	42
2.11	Presentation of Views.....	42
2.111	Man as a "Natural Thing".....	42
2.112	Materialism and Covert Science.....	43
2.113	Materialism in the Marxist Sense.....	44
2.12	Evaluation of the Materialistic View.....	49
2.121	The Truths of Materialism.....	50
2.122	The Denial of Consciousness.....	50
2.123	Internal Contradictions.....	51
2.124	The Environmental Relation.....	52
2.125	Conclusions.....	53
2.2	Idealism.....	54
2.21	Presentation of the Idealistic Image.....	54
2.211	The Fundamental Idea of Idea-lism.....	54
2.212	The Idealism of Descartes.....	54
2.213	The 'Idealism of Kant.....	55
2.214	Hegelian Idealism.....	58
2.215	Idealism As It Is Related to Philosophical Anthropology.....	60
	I) The Rejection of Man As A Body- Subject.....	60
	II) Completely Interiorized Consciousness.....	61
	III) The De-emphasizing of Intersubjectivity.....	63
	IV) The De-emphasizing of Human Historicity.....	63
2.22	Evaluation.....	66
2.221	The Strengths of Idealism.....	66
2.222	Consciousness as Stable and Spontaneous...66
2.223	"My" Consciousness and "Yours".....	67
2.3	Phenomenological Reduction.....	69
2.31	Introduction.....	69
2.32	The Reduction: Two Interpretations.....	71
2.33	Elements of Reduction.....	73

Chapter Three: The Human Subject.....	76
3.0 Introduction.....	76
3.1 Being-In-The-World.....	76
3.11 The Human Subject as Fact and Transcendent Being.....	78
3.12 The World As Center and Circumference.....	80
3.13 The World As the Center of Human Activity.....	81
3.2 The Basis of Meaning.....	84
3.21 The Meaning of "Sense".....	84
3.22 The Relation Between Sense and Behaviour.....	85
3.23 Sensation and Greater Appreciation of the Universe.....	86
3.3 Intention: The Core of Phenomenology.....	90
3.4 Phenomenological Intentionality as a Novelty.....	92
3.5 Refining the Position.....	94
3.51 The Opposition to Idealism.....	94
3.52 Total Reflexivity.....	94
3.53 Varied Intentional Modes.....	96
3.54 Phenomenology and Existence.....	97
3.6 Human Projects.....	99
3.61 Projects are Universal Human Phenomena....	100
3.7 The World of Values and the World of Projects.....	104
Chapter Four: Human Freedom.....	107
4.1 Introduction.....	107
4.2 History of the Issue.....	109
4.21 Scientific Determinism.....	111
4.22 The Influence of Determinism Upon Philosophy.....	113
4.3 Psychoanalytic Determinism.....	114
4.4 Psychological Freedom.....	115
4.5 Some Interim Conclusions.....	119
4.6 The Limits of Freedom.....	120
4.7 What is the Relation Between the Conscious and the Unconscious?.....	125
4.72 Is the Unconscious Real?.....	126
Chapter Five: What Is Man?.....	131
5.1 Introducing Problems.....	131
5.2 Materialism and Immaterialism.....	132
5.21 Materialism.....	132
5.22 Immaterialism.....	133
5.3 Arguments for the Existence of Human Immateriality.....	135
5.31 Knowledge.....	136
5.32 Freedom.....	138
5.33 Interim Conclusion.....	139
5.4 The Unity of the Person.....	140
5.5 Competing Theories of Man.....	142

5.51	Dualism.....	143
5.52	Monism.....	144
5.6	Aristotle and Aquinas.....	147
5.61	St. Thomas Aquinas.....	149
5.7	Death and Beyond.....	152
5.71	A Scientific Argument.....	153
5.72	The Classical Argument.....	155
5.73	What Is Life-After-Death Like?.....	158
Appendix: An Existentialist Phenomenology of
	Human Sexuality.....	163
8.0	Introduction.....	163
8.1	A Being-In-The-World, A Body-Subject.....	164
	Interim Conclusion.....	166
8.2	World.....	169
8.3	With Others.....	170
	1) Existential (Existentiell).....	170
	2) Existentiary (Existential).....	170
8.4	For a Project.....	171
8.5	Project and Values.....	172
8.6	Gabriel Marcel.....	173
8.7	The Invasion of Existence by Impulse.....	175
8.8	Modern Dilemmas.....	178
8.81	Man has alienated sexuality.....	178
8.82	Sex Alienating Man.....	179
8.9	Final Thoughts.....	179