

'For the Sake of Our Japanese Brethren'

Assimilation, Nationalism, and Protestantism Among the Japanese of Los Angeles, 1895–1942

Brian Masaru Hayashi

STANFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
STANFORD, CALIFORNIA 1995

Tables

- 1 Japanese Population in the Continental United States and in California, 1900–1940 4
- 2 Growth of Total and Japanese Populations of the City of Los Angeles, 1890–1930 4
- 3 Japanese Protestant Population in the Continental United States, by Denomination and Region, 1932 4
- 4 Average Membership of the Three Churches, 1902–1942 5
- 5 Occupations of Issei Protestant and Non-Protestant Males, 1920–1924 42
- 6 Issei Propertyholding, 1920–1924 43
- 7 Social Class of Protestant and Non-Protestant Issei in Los Angeles, 1920–1924 44
- 8 Protestant and Non-Protestant Issei Male Birth Order, Los Angeles, 1920–1924 44
- 9 Median Ages of Japanese in Los Angeles, by Generation and Sex, 1930 45
- 10 Median Entry Year and Years Lived in the United States and Japan, by Sex, 1930 45

- 11 Japanese in Los Angeles and in the Three Churches, by Generation and Sex, 1919–1925 45
- 12 Prefectural Background of Protestant and Non-Protestant Issei Males, Los Angeles, 1920–1924 47
- 13 Los Angeles Methodist Episcopal Church Income, by Source, 1918–1941 58
- 14 Average Benevolent Giving for the Los Angeles District of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Pacific Japanese Mission, and the Los Angeles (Japanese) Methodist Episcopal Church, 1918–1942 59
- 15 Los Angeles Union Church Income, by Dollar Amount and Percentage, 1918–1942 62
- 16 Number of Adult and Infant Baptisms for the Three Churches, 1917–1941 69
- 17 Nisei Name Types, 1920–1924 109
- 18 Nisei Citizenship, Los Angeles and California, 1920–1924 and 1930 110
- 19 Renunciation of Japanese Citizenship in Southern California, by Sex, 1917–1925 110
- 20 Protestants and Non-Protestants Among Issei, Nisei, and All Japanese in the United States, 1915–1976 154