

Contents

List of plates	vii
Preface	viii
Acknowledgements	x
Introduction	1
Part I The classical and contemporary Hollywood cinema	21
1 Is the gaze male?	23
2 Patriarchy and the male gaze in Cukor's Camille (1936)	36
3 Fetishism and the repression of Motherhood in Von Sternberg's Blonde Venus (1932)	49
4 The struggle for control over the female discourse and female sexuality in Welles's Lady from Shanghai (1946)	60
5 Forms of phallic domination in the contemporary Hollywood film: Brooks's Looking for Mr Goodbar (1977)	73
Part II The independent feminist film	83
X 6 The avant-gardes in Europe and the USA	85
7 Silence as female resistance in Marguerite Duras's Nathalie Granger (1972)	91
8 Female politics in the symbolic realm: Von Trotta's Marianne and Juliane (The German Sisters) (1981)	104
9 The American experimental woman's film: Yvonne Rainer's Lives of Performers and Film about a Woman Who . . . (1972–4)	113
X 10 The realist debate in the feminist film: a historical overview of theories and strategies in realism and the avant-garde theory film (1971–81)	125
11 The avant-garde theory film: three case studies from Britain and the USA: Sigmund Freud's Dora (1979), Thriller (1979), Mulvey/Wollen's Amy! (1980)	142

12	Mothers and daughters in two recent women's films: Mulvey/Wollen's Riddles of the Sphinx (1976) and Michelle Citron's Daughter-Rite (1978)	171
13	The woman director in the Third World: Sara Gomez's One Way or Another (1974)	189
14	The future of the independent feminist film: strategies of production, exhibition, and distribution in the USA	195
15	Conclusion: Motherhood and patriarchal discourse	200
	Notes	207
	Filmographies and synopses	224
	Appendix for teachers	237
	Bibliography	242
	Name index	253
	Subject index	257