

Contents of ECONOMIC SANCTIONS RECONSIDERED

History and Current Policy

Preface C. Fred Bergsten	xi
Acknowledgments	xii
1–Introduction	1
A Case Study Approach	2
Historical Overview	4
The Cyclical Popularity of Sanctions	9
Sender Countries and Their Motives	10
Limitations on the Use of Sanctions	12
Plan of the Book	14
2–Anatomy of a Sanctions Episode	35
Senders and Targets	35
Types of Sanctions	36
Foreign Policy Goals	38
Overview of the Variables	39
The Success of an Episode	41
Companion Policy Measures	41
Duration of Sanctions	41
International Cooperation	41
International Assistance to the Target Country	41
Economic Health and Political Stability	41
Prior Relations Between Sender and Target	41
Estimating the Costs	41
Country Size and Trade Linkages	41

Political Variables	49
Modest Changes in Policy	49
Destabilizing a Government	51
Disrupting Military Adventures	52
Impairing Military Potential	54
Other Major Policy Changes	55
Economic Variables	63
Size of Sender and Target Countries	63
Trade Linkages	64
Type of Sanction	65
The Cost of Sanctions	71
Conclusions and Recommendations	91
Are Sanctions Effective?	92
Nine Commandments	94
Percent Experience and Prospects for the Future	105
Do's and Don'ts	114
General Bibliography	117

Appendices

A Estimating the Costs of Sanctions: Methodology	120
B Selected Case Histories	123
48-5 US and COCOM v. USSR and COMECON (1948- : Technology Controls)	125
78-8 US v. Libya (1978- : Gadhafi)	140
79-1 US v. Iran (1979-81: Hostages)	153
80-1 US v. USSR (1980-81: Afghanistan)	163
81-1 US v. Nicaragua (1981- : El Salvador; Destabilize Sandinistas)	175
81-2 US v. Poland (1981-82: Martial Law)	192
81-3 US v. USSR (1981-82: Poland)	205
85-1 US v. South Africa (1985- : Apartheid)	221
87-1 US v. Panama (1987-90: Destabilize Noriega)	249
89-2 US v. China (1989- : Tiananmen Square Massacre)	268
90-1 US and UN v. Iraq (1990- : Kuwait)	283

Tables

1.1	Chronological summary of economic sanctions for foreign policy goals, 1914–90
1.2	Selected pre–World War I episodes of economic sanctions for foreign policy goals
1.3	Sanctions episodes initiated, aggregate cost of sanctions to target countries, and world exports, 1915–90
3.1	Cases involving modest changes in target-country policies: political variables
3.2	Cases involving destabilization of target-country governments: political variables
3.3	Cases involving disruption of military adventures (other than major wars): political variables
3.4	Cases involving impairment of military potential (including major wars): political variables
3.5	Cases involving other major changes in target-country policies (including surrender of territory): political variables
4.1	Comparison of US, EC, and Japanese sanctions in recent and continuing episodes
4.2	Rough estimate of the impact of US sanctions on US exports, 1987
4.3	Cases involving modest changes in target-country policies: economic variables
4.4	Cases involving destabilization of target-country governments: economic variables
4.5	Cases involving disruption of military adventures (other than major wars): economic variables
4.6	Cases involving impairment of military potential (including major wars): economic variables
4.7	Cases involving other major changes in target-country policies (including surrender of territory): economic variables
5.1	Success by type of policy goal
5.2	Success and International Cooperation
5.3	Success and International Assistance to target country
5.4	Success and health and stability of target country
5.5	The importance of size
5.6	Success, prior relations, and trade linkage
5.7	Success and the duration of sanctions
5.8	Success and costs to the target country
5.9	The price of success
5.10	Success by type of sanction

5.11	Success and companion policies	104
5.12	Success by period	106
5.13	The US experience with sanctions	108

Figure

A.1	Relation between elasticities of supply and demand and the sanctions multiplier	122
-----	---	-----