

Contents

	Acknowledgments	vii
Chapter 1	The New American Poetry: Fifty Years Later John R. Woznicki	1
Chapter 2	“Trying to Build on Their Elders’ Work”: The Correspondence of Donald Allen and William Carlos Williams Paul R. Cappucci	15
Chapter 3	Without a Mammalia Maxima, Charles Olson and Robert Duncan Apprehend a Cosmological American Poetics Joshua S. Hoeynck	29
Chapter 4	Why The New American Poetry Stays News Terence Diggory	59
Chapter 5	“Big Kiss for Mother England”: The New American Poetry in Britain Ben Hickman	81
Chapter 6	The New American Poetry and the Development of the Long Poem Joe Moffett	109

Chapter 7	Becoming Articulate: Kathleen Fraser and The New American Poetry Megan Swihart Jewell	133
Chapter 8	“In the Dawn that is Nowhere”: The New American Poetry and the State of Exception David Herd	155
Chapter 9	Science and The New American Poetry Peter Middleton	171
Chapter 10	Aurality and Literacy: The New American Poets and the Age of Technological Reproduction Seth Forrest	199
Chapter 11	The New American Poetry’s Objectivist Legacy: Linguistic Skepticism, the Signifier, and Material Language Burt Kimmelman	221
Chapter 12	Afterword Carla Billitteri	275
	Index	279
	Contributor Biographies	291