

POLITICAL (DIS)ENGAGEMENT

The changing nature of the 'political'

Nathan Manning

Contents

List of figures and tables	vi
Notes on contributors	vii
Acknowledgements	x
one Introduction Nathan Manning	1
Part One: The changing landscape of politics	25
two Does participation always have a democratic spirit? Michele Micheletti	27
three Love always wins: All Out's campaign for equality everywhere Andre Banks	53
four Social media and political participation: BBC World Service and the Arabic Spring Marie Gillespie, Nesrine Abdel Sattar and Mina Lami	77
Part Two: Contemporary political (dis)engagements	105
five Feeling politics: the importance of emotions for understanding electoral (dis)engagement Nathan Manning	107
six UK Uncut: direct action against austerity Tim Street	131
seven Doubly disillusioned? Young Muslims and mainstream British politics Parveen Akhtar	151
Part Three: The politics of identity and marginalisation	173
eight Political engagement among ethnic minority young people: exploring new grammars of action Therese O'Toole	175
nine 'Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere' Francine Fernandes	199
ten Political participation is self-interest ... but not in the way you might think Stephen Reicher, Yashpal Jogdand and Caoimhe Ryan	217
eleven Conclusion: politics as an open-ended process Nathan Manning	239
Index	247