

Living Alone

Globalization, Identity and Belonging

Lynn Jamieson

University of Edinburgh, UK

Roona Simpson

University of Glasgow, UK

palgrave
macmillan

Contents

List of Tables	xi
Series Editors' Preface	xiii
Acknowledgements	xv
1 Introduction	1
Three sets of reasons for studying and knowing more about people living alone	1
Popular stereotypes	1
Debate about identity and personal life	2
'Globalization' and individualized consumers	3
Definitions: A one-person household, dwelling and conducting domestic life alone	4
Fuzziness of 'one-person household'	5
Solo-living versus going solo, choice versus constraint	6
Scope and sources of evidence	7
Age, generation and gender	8
Locality, regions and globalization	9
Sources	11
Theoretical debate	12
Selves, subjectivity and globalization	12
Individualization, individualism and living alone	15
Part I Living Alone, Life Course and Life Transitions
Living alone and restructuring of the life course	23
What makes living alone possible? Levels of 'development' and material cultures	25
How thinkable is living alone? Family–sex–gender systems	25
Globalization as exogenous change, individualization and internal agency	27
Optional partnering and parenting: Resisting the discourse of love	29

2 Geographies and Biographies of Living Alone	33
Solo-living and global social change	33
South Asia	35
East Asia	38
Europe and North America	41
Gendered biographies of living alone	46
Conventional life course transitions	47
Heterogeneity by social class	51
Recession and transitions	52
Concluding remarks	54
3 Solo-living with and without Partnering and Parenting	57
Introduction	57
Solo-living childless 'Singles'	58
Disavowing choosing to be single	58
Living alone and 'Normal' life stages	59
'Natural progression' versus seeking	63
Meeting possible partners and Internet dating	64
Unlikely to partner and unlikely partners?	67
Relationships without co-residence: Keeping intimacy at a distance?	70
Following a 'normal' trajectory of co-residence	73
Considering co-residence but uncertainty or unresolved obstacles	74
Uncertainty about suitability of 'partner'	77
Living apart together: LAT committed to a partner and to living alone	78
Solo-living parents	79
No contact	81
Intimacy with and without partnering?	82
Concluding remarks	84
Part II Home, Consumption and Identity
Introduction	89
Identity and the meaning of home	89
Consumer culture: Homes and stuff	92
4 The Meaning of Home Alone	95
Home alone and pleasing yourself	96
Home for the self and home for others	98
Hospitality to friends and family	99

Homes from home	100
Holiday visitors and overnight visitors	101
Less hospitable homes	103
Unhomely or uncomfortable homes	103
Home as a site of survival	105
The exclusively personalized home	106
The stigmatized home	107
My touch, love and the presence and absence of self and others in the meaning of home	108
My touch: Home as materializing the self	108
Presence of absent others	109
Rational security and irrational love?	112
Gender and functional rather than personal homes	115
Concluding remarks	119
5 Living Alone, Consuming Alone?	122
Meals alone, in company and as social events	125
Experiences of cooking for one	125
Cooking for others	128
Eating out alone	130
Holidays and travel	131
Christmas as the 'family holiday'	136
Concluding remarks	141
Part III Networks, Community and Place
Introduction	145
Social capital	147
Capturing social connectedness	148
The move to 'chosen' relationships?	150
Place and 'community'	151
6 Solo-living and Connectedness	157
Living alone and well-being in later life	157
Living alone and social networks at working age	164
Experiences of social connection: Men and women living alone at working age	166
Gender and social interaction	166
Social suffusion of friends and family	168
Receiving and providing support	171
Community service	174
Partnership and parental status	175
Home alone and social isolation	178
Concluding remarks	182

7	Place, Mobility and Migration	185
	Living alone and residential histories	185
	Living alone and embeddedness in place	189
	Locality, belonging and community	191
	Employment mobility, social class and 'elective belonging'	193
	Relating at a distance	198
	Qualified belonging?	202
	Attachment to people in place	205
	Concluding remarks	208
8	The Future of Living Alone	211
	Future trends	211
	Diversity in population characteristics and outcomes	212
	Globalization, individualization and resilience of patriarchy	214
	Everyday lives effecting social change	216
	Identity, individualism, consumption and 'plenitude'	218
	Disembedding and networked individualism	220
	From living alone to living-alone-together?	222
	Appendix 1: The Rural and Urban Solo Living: Social Integration, Quality of Life and Future Orientations Study	227
	Sampling strategy	227
	Data collection	228
	Sample characteristics	229
	Appendix 2: Characteristics and Circumstances of Working-Age Men and Women Living Alone in Scotland	247
	Section 1: Housing	247
	Section 2: Socio-economic and demographic characteristics	249
	Section 3: Type of locality, transport, Internet access	254
	Notes	260
	Bibliography	267
	Index	294