Introduction	2
Glossary of new terms for wardrobe research	12
PART I: INVESTIGATING WARDROBES
Mapping contents
Method 1. Recording items of clothing retired from use: Klepp and Laitala, 'Wardrobe study of clothing going out of use'	18
Method 2. Auditing a section of a wardrobe: Klepp and Skuland, 'Wardrobe studies, wardrobe sections studies'	22
Method 3. Auditing total fashion assets: counting clothing and the tools and resources of clothing care: Fletcher, Harrison, Klepp and Jørgensrud, 'Whole fashion audit'	25
Method 4. Drawing the life, flows and associated relationships of a wardrobe: Harrison and Fletcher, 'Mapping my clothes'	28
Mapping wardrobes across time
Method 5. Study of historical textile books: Klepp, 'Textual analysis of textile craft books'	31
Method 6. Analysing texts about laundering from the nineteenth century: Klepp, 'Text analysis of dirty laundry'	34
Method 7. Using probate inventories to examine status, gender and age through time: Ulväng, 'Count and calculate. The probate inventory and the historical wardrobe'	37
Method 8. Drawing 'experience curves' that express individuals' five-year-long attachment to clothes: Valle-Noronha, Kujala and Niinimäki, 'User Experience Curves (ux Curves)'	39

Mapping the space of the wardrobe

Method 9. Mapping retail spaces and counting shopping bags along a transect: Fletcher and Harrison, 'Mapping, counting, loitering' 42

Method 10. Essay writing to understand a place and the relationships to clothing there: Tranberg Hansen, 'Student essays about clothing' 45

Wardrobe know-how

Method 11. Clustering garments in heaps and then sorting through them to reveal patterns or formulas for dressing: Skjold, 'Biographical wardrobe method' 47

Method 12. Ranking dresses on a rail by relative quality and by the perceived likelihood of failure: Yuille, 'Consumer material perceptions' 50

Keys to the wardrobe

Method 13. Practices of garment use: Fletcher, 'Craft of use' 53

Method 14. Examining one garment type (jeans) in multiple wardrobes: Lindblad, 'Study of Denim/Wardrobe Studies' 56

Method 15. Most and least favourite knitwear: Twigger Holroyd, 'Garment-led interviews' 58

Method 16. Self-selection of items in six audit categories: Whitson-Smith, 'Wardrobe audit' 61

Method 17. By brand: Connor-Crabb, 'The wear and tear of clothing – perceptions on clothing longevity' 64

Method 18. Exploring intimate items: Holmes, 'Underwear drawer narratives' 66

Method 19. By notions of what is valuable: Haugrud, 'Wardrobe studies' 68

Individuals

- Method 20. Through photography to capture images of daily dress and examine the experience of wearing clothing: Emma Hoette, 'Daily catalogue' 72
- Method 21. A process of 'linguaging' to create change for individuals around clothing: Tham, 'Linguaging fashion moments' 75
- Method 22. Mapping 'personhood' for dementia sufferers: Mooney, 'Caring through clothing: the "map of me"' 78

Practices

- Method 23. Diary keeping about laundry behaviours using gifted garments as 'cultural probes': Rigby, 'Laundry probes' 81
- Method 24. Diary keeping about user experiences using gifted garments: Valle-Noronha and Niinimäki, 'Design probes applied as fashion design probes' 84
- Method 25. Diary keeping about consumption habits and practices: Hedtjärn Wester and Petersson McIntyre, 'Consumption diaries: making sense of wardrobes' 87
- Method 26. Participant-led photographing and ethnographic discussion of wardrobe contents: Hall, 'Multi-sensory, multi-method wardrobe research' 89
- Method 27. Video interviews of second-hand clothes: Martin and Grose, 'Goodwill label research' 92

Dynamics

- Method 28. Interviews exploring what constitutes 'acceptable' fashion courtesy of witness statements from victims of the fashion police: von Busch, 'Fashion police witness statement' 96
- Method 29. Using performance to understanding use of garments and inform the design of enduring items: Rissanen, Krappala, Kela, Aho and Ziegler, 'Performing wardrobes' 99
- Method 30. Exploring fashion and the wardrobe as part of a larger system: Brun Petersen and Riisberg, 'Actor Network Theory' 102
- Method 31. Using ethnography to influence design: Bjerck, 'Mediating user experiences' 105

PART III: TRANSFORMING WARDROBES

Doing together

- Method 32. Knitting: Twigger Holroyd, 'Reknitting workshops' 110
- Method 33. Mending: Towers, 'Wear > Craft > Mend' 113
- Method 34. Repairing with young people: Collins and Dixon, 'Practice-based workshop interviews' 115

Exploring

- Method 35. Questioning the role of consumption in contemporary life by undertaking to wear only the clothes already in a wardrobe for a lifetime: Middleton, 'The pledge (an 'ontoexperiment')' 117
- Method 36. Using experimental garment forms to query current behaviours and how to change them: Day Fraser and Doyle, 'Critical use' 120

Advising

- Method 37. Style advice, wardrobe organisation and streamlining: Roper, 'The Wardrobe Angel' 124
- Method 38. Inviting designers into wardrobes to give a wearer a fresh look at their wardrobe: Whitty and McQuillan, 'Wardrobe Hack' 128

Pedagogy

- Method 39. Awareness and personal practices in fashion learning and teaching: Parker, 'Wardrobe inquiry as an educational tool' 131

Experiences

- Method 40. Testing the smell of a range of fabrics, quantitatively and qualitatively: Laitala and Klepp, ‘Sensory odour testing by a consumer panel’ 136
- Method 41. Testing people’s materials knowledge and experience: Klepp and Hebrok, ‘Sensory material test’ 139
- Method 42. Trialling clothing pieces by wearers: Klepp and Laitala, ‘User trials’ 143
- Method 43. Documenting awareness of the sense of touch and wearer’s sensuous experiences of cloth: Bang and Riisberg, ‘Tangible Dialogue Tools’ 145
- Method 44. Using photographs to elicit memories and recollect places, people and objects, including garments: Turney, ‘Look books’ 148

Handling and examining garments

- Method 45. Methods of unpicking clothing to disclose the material and fashion system embodied within: Ruby Hoette, ‘Unpicking the Fashion System – Practice as Research’ 151
- Method 46. Scrutinising historical re-fashioning and re-purposing techniques to understand lifespan in contemporary garments: Aspinall, ‘Re-interpreting, re-fashioning’ 155
- Method 47. Auditing discarded and damaged garments leftover from clothes swaps: Whitson-Smith, ‘Clothes exchange waste audit’ 157
- Method 48. Laboratory testing of textile material properties: Laitala, ‘Textile material tests in a laboratory’ 159
- Method 49. Using subjective and objective measures to better understand clothing properties: Laitala and Klepp, ‘Method triangulation’ 162
- Method 50. Combining textile testing and design-led approaches: Woodward, ‘Interdisciplinary material methods’ 164

Conclusion: the family tree of wardrobe methods 168
