

CONTENTS

Editorial note	VII
Translator's note	IX
Preface to the English edition	XI
Chapter 1
ON THE ONTOLOGY OF 'PRESENTATION'	1
1.1. On the ontology of 'presentation'	1
1.2. The semantic range of the 'phenomenon'-category: the dialectic of 'being for us'	35
1.3. The semantic changes of a concept	64
Chapter 2
THE GENESIS OF VIRTUAL REALITY	83
2.1. The objectivity of illusions	83
2.2. Immediacy and the conditions allowing the occurrence of illusions	104
2.3. Object-making, everyday objectivity, averageness	124
2.4. The watershed of modern philosophy	150
Chapter 3
PRACTICAL CONSCIOUSNESS: SUBJECTIVE CONDITIONS FOR THE FORMATION OF ILLUSIONS	167
3.1. Practical consciousness: subjective conditions for the formation of illusions	167
3.2. Teleological thinking and the reflexivity of 'making'	168
3.3. The inverted world: final causality	175
3.4. The formalism of everyday consciousness	191
3.5. Ideology as quasi-reality	199
3.6. False consciousness and manipulation	227

CONTENTS

Chapter 4
THE ILLUSORY FORMS OF EVERYDAY LIFE	241
4.1. The illusory forms of everyday life	241
4.2. Illusions of playfulness, irony and freedom	244
4.3. Ambiguity, misunderstanding and lying — the imperceptible 'quasi-reality' of everyday communication	261
4.4. Artistic illusions and the art of illusions	275
Index of names	287
Index of subjects	290