

Race Riots

Comedy and Ethnicity in Modern British Fiction

Michael L. Ross

McGill-Queen's University Press
Montreal & Kingston • London • Ithaca

Contents

- List of Illustrations vii
- Acknowledgments ix
- Preface xi
- Introduction: Preliminary Convulsions 3
- PART ONE PUNCH LINES 23
- 1 Caliban and His Progeny 25
- 2 Inferiority Complexions:
The London Charivari 47
- 3 White Mischief:
Evelyn Waugh's African Charivari 73
- 4 Joyce Cary's Tragic African Clown 92
- PART TWO PASSAGES TO ELSEWHERE 111
- 5 Forster's Funny Bridge Party:
Nation and Humour in A Passage to India 113
- 6 Roman Catholic Carnival:
Muriel Spark's Passage to Jerusalem 137

- 7 The Far and the Near:
Pym and Taylor 160
- PART THREE THE EMPIRE LAUGHS BACK 177
- 8 Samuel Selvon and the Carnival of Reverse Colonization 179
- 9 Rerouting the Comic:
Salman Rushdie's The Satanic Verses 203
- 10 "A Funny Kind of Englishman":
Hanif Kureishi's Carnival of Ethnicities 228
- 11 "Some Subtleties of the Isle":
Matthew Kneale's Anti-Tempest 248
- 12 The Empire Laughs Last 269
- Notes 281
- Bibliography 291
- Index 303