

STRING FELT THREAD

The Hierarchy of Art and Craft in American Art

ELISSA AUTHER

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA PRESS
Minneapolis | London

CONTENTS

List of Illustrations	viii
Introduction: The Hierarchy of Art and Craft	xi
1. FIBER ART AND THE STRUGGLE FOR LEGITIMACY	1
The Category of Fiber Art	7
Cultural Definitions of Textiles and the Bauhaus Weavers	17
Fiber and Women's Work	21
Fiber Art, the Craft Revival of the 1960s and 1970s, and Popular Craft	25
The Critical Reception of Fiber Art in the 1960s and 1970s	28
Mildred Constantine and the Battle for Fiber Art	32
2. PROCESS ART, POSTMINIMALISM, AND MATERIALITY	47
Felt in the Work of Robert Morris	51
The Critical Reception of the Felts	60
String, Rope, and Cord in the Work of Eva Hesse	68
The Reception of Hesse's Work in Fiber	80
Fiber, Tactility, and the Boundary between Art and Non-Art	87

3. THE FEMINIST POLITICIZATION OF THE ART/CRAFT DIVIDE	93
Promises and Problems of the Feminist Critique of the Hierarchy of Art and Craft	97
Faith Ringgold: "A Painter Who Works in the Quilt Medium"	103
Miriam Schapiro: "The Quiet Revolution"	119
Ringgold, Schapiro, and the Art World's Appropriation of Quilting	128
Harmony Hammond: The Mythic Space of the "Feminine Stitch"	135
Judy Chicago: The Vitality of Embroidery	146
CONCLUSION: FIBER, CRAFT, AND CONTEMPORARY ART	163
Acknowledgments	177
Notes	179
Bibliography	209
Index	231