

Contemporary British Children's Fiction and Cosmopolitanism

Fiona McCulloch

Contents

|                                                                                                            |       |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------|
| Series Editor's Foreword                                                                            | ix    |
| Acknowledgements                                                                                    | xi    |
| Introduction: Charting Contemporary Children's Fiction                                                 | 1 |
| PART I                                                                                                 |       |
| Ethical Endeavours                                                                                         |       |
| 1 'We're All Human, Aren't We?': Scottish Cosmopoliticsin J. K. Rowling's Harry Potter          | 35    |
| 2 'People and Their Differences': Cosmofeminismin Jackie Kay's Strawgirl                        | 63    |
| PART II                                                                                                |       |
| Conflict and Conciliation                                                                                  |       |
| 3 'You Are a Team': Reconfiguring Communityin Theresa Breslin's Divided City                    | 83    |
| 4 'We're All Connected': Transnational Journeysin Gillian Cross's Where I Belong                | 98    |
| 5 'Hope Amongst This Madness': Peace Buildingin Kerry Drewery's A Brighter Fear                 | 115   |
| PART III                                                                                               |       |
| Future Freedoms                                                                                            |       |
| 6 'We Must Fight for a New Future': EnvisioningTomorrow's World in Saci Lloyd's Momentum | 135   |

|   |                                                                                                                       |            |
|---|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| 7 | 'A New Home in the World': Nomadic Writing andWorld Citizenship in Julie Bertagna's Exodus Trilogy | 150 |
|   | Conclusion: Cosmopolitan Children: No Place Like Home?                                                         | 175 |
|   | Bibliography                                                                                                   | 185        |
|   | Index                                                                                                          | 197        |