

TREKONOMICS

MANU SAADIA

pipertext

CONTENTS

Foreword by Brad DeLong	xi
Introduction: “Dream not of today, Mister Picard”	1
Chapter 1: “ . . . Money went the way of the dinosaurs” The absence of money in Star Trek	19
Chapter 2: “ . . . Why is everyone so worried about holograms taking over the universe?” The meaning of work in Star Trek’s society	41
Chapter 3: “Tea, Earl Grey, hot” The replicator	65
Chapter 4: “ . . . Only a fool would stand in the way of progress” Natural limits and technology substitution	87
Chapter 5: “ . . . The thought that warp engines might be causing some kind of damage” Free riding and negative externalities in a post-scarcity world	109
Chapter 6: “ . . . That future, that space station, all those people—they exist . . .” Sources of trekonomics in classic science fiction	137
Chapter 7: “There are still many human emotions I do not comprehend . . .” The psychology of utopia	165
Chapter 8: “Never be afraid to mislabel a product” The Ferengis, interstellar capitalists	187
Chapter 9: “I live in the hope that you may one day see the universe for what it truly is . . .” Prospects for trekonomics in the real world	209
Conclusion: “Live Long, and Prosper”	237
Acknowledgments	243

Further Reading	247
Star Trek Episodes Cited	255
Science Fiction for Further Reading	259
About the Author	261
List of Patrons	263