

Contents

List of figures	xi
Preface	xii
Acknowledgments	xiv
Introduction	1
PART I
The nation as its women	17
1 “The places occupied by women”: gender, subalternity, and the (nation-)state in Ankur and Nishant	19
2 “Performing wom[e]n”: the “ Nachne-Ganewalis ” of Bhumika , Mandi , and Sardari Begum	47
PART II
The nation’s alternative and self-authorized biographies	79
3 Fictional engagements with (national) history: Junoon , Mammo , and Trikaal	81
4 A pantheon of national heroes: Nehru , The Making of the Mahatma , and Bose: The Forgotten Hero	112
PART III
The nation and its ideologies of development	143
5 “Making these cause films”: cinematic renditions of the developmental agendas of the (nation-)state	145

x Contents

Notes	166
Bibliography	199
Index	214